KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that

SCROFULA

can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Parient Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, &c. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alternative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillinger, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great preciousness, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

CHAPTER XXIII.

'Yes, there's folks as find a pleasure in undervaluing what they know but little about,' said Mr. Craig.

'Why, the Scotch tunes are just like a scolding, nagging woman,' Betty went on, without deigning to notice Mr. Craig's remark. 'They go on with the same thing over and over again, and never come to a reasonable end. Anybody 'ud think the Scotch tunes had always been asking a question of somebody as deaf as old Taft, and had never got an answer yet.'

Adam minded the less about sitting by Mr. Casson, because this position enabled him to see Hetty, who was not far off him at the next table. Hetty, however, had not even noticed his presence yet, for she was giving angry attention to Totty, who insisted in drawing up her feet on to the bench in antique fashion, and thereby threatened to make dusky marks on Hetty's pink-and-white frock. No sooner were the little fat legs pushed down than up they came again, for Totty's eyes were too busy in staring at the large dishes to see where the plum pudding was, for her to retain any consciousness of her legs. Hetty got quite out of patience, and at last, with a trown and pout, and gathering tears, she said:

'Oh dear, aunt, I wish you'd speak to Totty; she keeps putting her legs up so, and messing my frock.'

'What's the matter wi' the child? She can never please you,' said the mother.
'Let her come by the side o' me, then; I can put up wi' her.'

Adam was looking at Hetty, and saw the frown and pout, and the dark eyes seeming to grow larger with pettish half-gathered tears. Q. not Mary Burge, who sat next enough to see that Hetty was cross and that Adam's eyes were fixed on her, thought that so sensible a man as Adam must be reflecting on the small value of beauty in a woman whose temper was bad.
Mary was a good girl, not given to indulge in evil feelings, but she said to herself that, since Hetty had a bad temper, it was better that Adam should know it. And it was quite true that, if Hetty had been plain, she would have looked very ugly and unamiable at the moment, and no one's moral judgment upon her would have been in the least beguiled. But really there was something quite charming in her pettishness; it looked so much more like innocent distress than ill-humor; and the severe Adam felt no movement of disapprobation; he only felt a sort of amused pity, as if he had seen a kitten setting up its back, or a little bird with its feathers ruffled.

He could not gather what was vexing her, but it was impossible to feel otherwise than that she was the prettiest thing in the world and that if he could have his way, nothing should ever vex her any more.
And presently, when Totty was gone, she caught his eye, and her face broke into one of its brightest smiles as she nodded to him. It was a bit of flirtation; she knew Mary Burge was looking at them. But the smile was like wine to Adam.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE HEALTH DRINKING.

When the dinner was over, and the first draughts from the great cask of birthday ale were brought up, room was made for the broad Mr. Poyser at the side of the table, and two chairs were placed at the head. It had been settled very definitely what Mr.
Poyser was to do when the young squire should appear, and for the last five minutes he had been in a state of abstraction, with his eyes fixed on the dark picture opposite, and his hands busy with the loose cash and other articles in his breeches pockets.

When the young Squire entered, with Mr.
Irvine by his side, every one stood up, and this movement of homage was very agreeable to Arthur. He liked to feel his own importance, and, besides that, he cared a great deal for the good will of these people; he was fond of thinking that they had a hearty, special regard for him. The pleasure he felt was in his face as he said:

'My grandfather and I hope all our friends here have enjoyed their dinner, and find my birthday ale good. Mr. Irvine and I are to come to taste it with you, and I'm sure we shall all like anything the better that the Rector shares with us.'

All eyes were now turned on Mr. Poyser, who, with his hands still busy in his pockets, began with the deliberateness of a slow striking clock. 'Captain, my neighbors have put up me to speak for 'em today, for where folks think pretty much like, one spokesman's as good as a score.
And though we've may happen got contrary ways o' thinking about a many things—one man lays down his hand one way, an' another another—an' I'll not take it upon me to speak to no man's farmin' but my own—his I'll say, as we're a' o' one mind about our young Squire.
We've pretty much all on us known you when you were a little un, an' we've never known anything on you but what was good an' honorable. You speak fair an' you act fair, and we're joyful when we look forward to your being our landlord, for we believe you mean to do right by everybody, an' all make no man's bread bitter to him if you can help it. That's what I mean, and that is what we all mean; and when a man's said that he means, he'd better stop. For the ale 'll be none the better for stannin', an' I'll not say how we like th' ale yet, for we warn't to taste it till we'd drank you'r health in it; but the dinner was good, an' if there's anybody who hasn't enjoyed it, it must be the fault of his own inside. An' as for the Rector's company, its well known as that's welcome to all the parish wherever he may be: an' I hope, an' all hope as he'll live to see us old folk, an' our children grown to men an' women, an' your honor a family man. I've no more to say as concerns the present time, an' so we'll drink our young Squire's health—three times three.'

Hereupon a glorious shouting, a rapping, a jingling, a clattering, and a shouting, with plentiful de capo, pleasanter than a strain of sublimest music in the ears that receive such a tribute for the first time.
Arthur had felt a twinge of conscience during Mr. Poyser's speech, but it was too feeble to nullify the pleasure he felt in being praised. Did he not deserve what was said of him on the whole? If there was something in his conduct that Poyser wouldn't have liked if he had known it, why, no man's conduct will bear too close an inspection, and Poyser was not likely to know it; and, after all, what had he done?
Gone a little too far, perhaps, in flirtation, but another man in his place would have acted much worse; and no harm would come—no harm should come, for the next time he was alone with Hetty he would explain to her that she must not think seriously of him or of what had passed. It was necessary to Arthur, you perceive, to be satisfied with himself; uncomfortable thoughts must be got rid of by good intentions for the future, which can be formed so rapidly that he had time to be uncomfortable and to become easy again before Mr. Poyser's slow speech was finished, and when it was time for him to speak he was quite light-hearted.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

British and American Book and Tract Society.

SIR.—Truly one has to look abroad if he desires to know aught of his own country.
Who would have thought, had he not read the annual report of the "British and American Book and Tract Society," that our Island home—the "gem of the Gulf"— could be justly classed with "the hungry shores of Labrador and Newfoundland, and the backwoods districts of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Cape Breton; places where books are scarce, where the struggle for bare existence is a hard one, and where the messengers of the gospel of peace cannot very often appear." Yet so it has been classed in the report of this Society—a body of honorable and christian men, who, no doubt, know whereof they speak. To this portion of the report I will not, on second thought, raise any objection
