NEW STORE

AT

North River Bridge

L. E. PROWSE has opened, in Mr. George Dockendorff's Store, at North River, with a

First-Class Stock of Dry Goods, Clothing and Groceries,

Which he will sell at LOW PRICES.

The people need have no fear of Small Pox in the Goods, as I import direct from the English markets, and ever since the outbreak of the disease in the city the goods have been thoroughly fumigated, so there can be no possible chance of infection in the Goods.

The people at North River will find this a great convenience, as it will save them the trip to town, and they can buy just as cheap at home.

The Store in the city will be continued as usual. I need not say anything about the Low Prices, as all know I sell Cheap.

A GIRL'S LAST CHANCE.

and sent us all, without ceremony or distinction, to bed.

Very early in the morning I waked up, and, without disturbing Helen, I rose and dressed myself and stole softly out into the garden.

'I mean to take a good look at the bees,' thought I.

Early as I was, my little winged charges had been before me, and were soaring forth in tiny clouds of blackness toward the level morning sunshine.

'They must love to work better than I do,' was the upshot of my meditations.

'Horrid, fussy little things. What have they done to deserve being held up to all creation as a model?'

And then I began, Alaschar-like, to count up the possibilities of making a fortune within the next ten years out of these bees.

Supposing that all went prosperously—supposing that honey held its own in the market—supposing that each swarm duplicated itself half a dozen times over—supposing—

But in my abstracted saunter up and down the narrow pathway I lost sight of the possibilities of making a fortune within the next ten years out of these bees.
