CHAPTER XII

Continued

Thurlow's first impression of the trader as he clambered over the schooner's side from the whaleboat which had brought him out to them, was a mixed one. He was a big man—quite six feet high and broad in proportion—and his general appearance did something to bear out the captain's description of him as a "hard case." His face was swarthy and rugged, with deep set dark eyes, a firm mouth and a somewhat heavy jaw. The forehead was good, but there was a suggestion of brutality about the features which struck him forcibly. He was clean-shaven, and dressed in a khaki shirt and khaki drill trousers with pipe-clayed plimolls on his feet.

As he straightened up to face them, the captain stepped forward with extended hand. "Howdy, Strang!" he greeted him. "You remember me, don't you? I looked in here about five years ago with that Yankee missionary."

"Yes, I remember," Strang returned, in a surprisingly cultured

The look was only momentary, however, and when he spoke his voice betrayed no trace of his feelings.

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Thurlow," he said. "You, too, Doctor." He shook hands with them both and then turned back to the former. "I've been expecting you for quite a while. Sorensen brought the news that you'd been appointed nearly three months ago. He's our only link with the outside world, you know, and he only comes here twice a year. He said he thought they were arranging a passage for you direct from Auckland."

"So they did," the captain told him. "But let me tell you, you're lucky to get him here at all! He took passage on the old Matuani an' it seems that she hit something 'n' went under. We dunno where it happened exactly, but as far as we can make out, he was the only one to get away from her. She was reported lost with all hands before we left Brisbane, but we picked him up a week ago in her whale-boat. There she is, stowed in the main hatch there. He must have been three weeks adrift in her, an' when we took him aboard he was just about all in. I reckon another day would ha' done the trick, an' he'd only have been fit for sewing up."

"Good God!" Strang exclaimed, staring at Thurlow. "But what was it? What happened?" The latter shrugged.

slim shoulder; his shirt was out at elbows, his hat of straw fraying at the brim.

"Oh, no," we rejoined, "they're to be envied. A prince of a crown is not more favored than they."

"But look at that!" she shrugged, "poor little know-nothing, see nothing!"

"That fellow!" we offered, "if every child knew and saw as much it would be quite an adventure in education."

She looked skeptical. "Ask him where the big trout hide," we chuckled, "or where the best berries are to be found! He can take you to every bird's nest in the neighborhood; he knows the cats and dogs about, personally—and the horses and foals; he can lead you to the best clam banks—"

"I reckon another day would ha' done the trick, an' he'd only have been fit for sewing up."

"He's whistling!" she smiled in amazement, "and I thought him and all farm-children objects to be pitied!"

Yes, how exceedingly full "and running over" are these days; of school and the fishin', of new animals of farm-kittens, calves, lambskins, piglets; and for added fascination here, a wily fox, there, a resplendent pheasant, here the beat of wild ducks' wings, there a prowling racoon; of new bird calls to enchant—and baseballs and bats, and in most places, a bicycle to spring-service. To be pitied—these farm-children? On the contrary, they are much to be envied!

WOOL MARKETING

Wool will be received at the Reid warehouse at the foot of Prince Street, Charlottetown, after May 15th. Wool shipped by rail or truck should be carefully tagged and addressed to the Wool Grading Station, Charlottetown, "Freight Collect." Payment of freight by truck will be on the basis of rail rates only. Truckers must present a proper warehouse receipt before truckage will be paid. An advance payment will be made promptly on receipt of wool and a final payment as soon as wool is graded.

In shipping, each fleece should be tied separately with paper string and packed in old, but clean sacking. Use one large sack if at all possible, as this aids in checking. A number of old, clean sacks sewed together will suffice. Large sacks may be secured from the Sheep Breeders' Association, Charlottetown, for lots of over twelve fleeces. EACH SACK SHOULD BE TAGGED WITH THE NAME AND ADDRESS OF THE OWNER WRITTEN IN CLEAR LETTERING WITH INK, ONE TAG TO BE SECURELY ATTACHED TO THE OUTSIDE OF THE SACK AND ANOTHER PLACED ON THE INSIDE. No responsibility will be accepted for sacks without tags. A deduction of one cent per pound will be made for wool tied with binder twine or other unsatisfactory string. Shipping tags and proper paper twine are available at the Provincial Department of Agriculture free of charge.

It is in your interest to see that wool is properly prepared for market. Growers should:

1. Remove all tags and dung locks before tying each fleece.
2. Any burry, chaffy, or strawy portions of wool should also be removed and shipped separately.
3. Sheep should be shorn when dry, and wool should be stored in a place free from dampness.
4. If there are any black fleeces mark it on shipping tags.

All wool should be shipped between May 15th and July 15th. Do not sacrifice your wool and market it carelessly through unreliable sources. Market it through Canada's finest Co-operative Producer Association, the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, Limited, whose representative is the P. E. I. Sheep Breeders' Association. Do not forget that patrons selling wool through these Associations have always received the top of the market. Furthermore these Associations are working in your interests in supplying sheep producers with equipment, parasite remedies, and services at reduced prices. Some of these materials such as Phenothiazine for internal parasites, and Cooper's Sheep Dip for external treatment, are now being distributed at reduced rates at our Sheep Field Days, and direct from the Department of Agriculture. In addition the Association is doing everything possible in the purchase and distribution of rams to assist the industry.

Co-operate with your Association and support it by marketing your wool co-operatively this year. Remember we pay the freight and you get the most out of your product.
