Sport Echoes From Prince County

We saw for the first time the provincial scholastic skating meet in Charlottetown last Tuesday evening. One thing that impressed us was the large number of young skaters who took a tumble during the races. If that many horses broke in a horse race, betting would be more of a "hit-or-miss" business than it is. No doubt some of the kids fall because they are being forced beyond their natural speed, but in the wild scramble around the first two corners, the only thing that might insure a contestant against falling would be a horseshoe or a rabbit's foot. Come to think of it, four rabbit's feet would be still better. Considering the fact however, that the favorites do come through a fair percentage of the time, it can't be all luck in coming around those corners without sweeping up the ice.

United Church Moderator Discusses Great Work Of The Church In India

Rt. Rev. A.A. Scott, moderator of the United Church of Canada was the speaker at Trinity United Church, Summerside, last night. His message dealt with the work and influence of the Christian Church in India, where most of his ministry was spent. He remarked that the missionary work was more difficult now than at any other time. He pointed out that many people were influenced by Christianity who have not yet become professing Christians, and he went on to speak of the evangelistic impact made by the hospitals in their every day service to the people. He cited the work of the mission school as an effective form of evangelism. Dr. Scott visualized the training in agriculture under the leadership of such men as Dr. Samuel Higginbottom and showed that it is vital missionary work. The caste system, which did not encourage social service, was also

Important Issues At Stake In South African Election

JOHANNESBURG. (Reuters) — On April 15 South Africans will go to the polls to make decisions that may chart the course of their country for years. Their vote in elections for the lower house of Parliament will either keep in power Premier Daniel Malan and his Nationalist party or return to power the United party of Jacob Strauss. If Malan wins, South Africa probably will become a republic, either inside or outside the British Commonwealth. If that were to happen, liberals fear the country would be made to conform to the pattern of a few "white supremacy" extremists. If Strauss should lead his more internationally-minded party back to power after 4 1/2 years in opposition, independent observers predict there will be a world-wide wave of confidence in the Union of South Africa, which could be expected to follow the liberal traditions of the late Gen. Jan Christiaan Smuts. Socially South Africa is one of the world's most complicated countries. Not only are there differences between white persons and colored, but also between extreme Afrikaans descendants of Dutch settlers and other white citizens, largely of British extraction.

Dictatorial Tendencies Many moderate Afrikaansers deplore "dictatorial" tendencies in Malan's nationalist party hierarchy, and try to uphold the more liberal outlook of past Afrikaanser statesmen like Smuts. Both sides are in principal that racial segregation is necessary. But observers wonder whether Malan's uncompromising laws against "passive resistance" to his apartheid strict racial segregation policy will provoke more disturbances if ruthlessly applied. Industry's main complaint against Malan is that his policies have frightened away international investors. The most stimulating factor in the post-war economic boom has been the new goldfields in the Orange Free State and recent moves to extract uranium from gold ore. The new fields are estimated to have some $3,350,000,000 worth of gold in them. These enormous new gold resources give South Africa a strategic importance which her government could exploit internationally. However, support for the proposed Middle East defence pact under Malan reassures the world that the nationalist government is aware of the benefits of such international co-operation. No matter who wins the election, South Africa's continued support of and strong role in Western defence appears assured. Her domestic future is not so easy to predict.

Breaks Go

Continued from page 6 ly after Gustavson returned to the ice miller made a good stop of Watson's screened shot with Ford parked on his door step. On the very next play MacMeekin robbed Ford from point blank range. Atlantics Score Three The Islanders were forcing an attack in the Halifax zone when Bloom broke up a play and started Watson away for what proved to be the Atlantics' fourth goal. Watson zig-zagged over the Islanders' line and fed Campbell a perfect pass at the corner of the net. Campbell beat Millar from the crease. A little over a minute later Muckle Hollett raced down the ice, cut through the Islanders' defence and blazed a high hard shot into the corner for the Atlantics' fifth goal. George McLagan was chased for interfering with Hayes in the Islanders' corner and drew a misconduct penalty for protesting the decision. While he was off the Islanders held well. Then commenced the parade of Halifax penalties. Bloom went off for elbowing, Bowness was chased for tripping and Laufman and Bergeron followed with minor offences. The Islanders drew Al Millar at the 14:27 mark and played for more than three minutes with six forwards against the three Halifax players and goalie MacMeekin. During that time they had only four good scoring chances and failed to click. Clements went in all alone but was stopped at the goal mouth. Gray whistled a hard 25-foot shot that MacMeekin stopped and seconds later he fired one that hit the post and bounced out. Wiseman also came close when his scorching drive missed the open corner by inches. Billy Ford completed the scoring with less than half a minute left in the game as the teams played at full strength. Millar stopped Campbell on his try but Ford followed up to grab the loose puck and fire it in the open net. Lineup: Charlottetown—Goal, Millar; defence, McLagan, Travis, Gustavson; forwards, King, Bowness, Campbell, Watson, Ford, Laufman, MacPhee, Good, Hollett. Referees: Jimmy Kelly, George O'Donoghue.
