EXTERMINATING THE RED MAN.

Starvation, Whiskey and Ruthlessly Whites Destroying the Indians.

Quebec, Aug. 15.—Pre Gayce, an Ojibwa Indian, who has just returned from a visit to the missions of his order on the Labrador coast, reports that the Indians there are in a state of starvation.

He complains that they are dying of hunger, and that the missionaries are swarming with fish, especially salmon, but that as these waters are mostly in the hands of clubs or wealthy men, they are unable to avail themselves of these sources of natural food supply.

He also complains that while the Indians and settlers along the coast are forbidden to utilize the eggs of seabirds, which were formerly a source of food and profit to them, the Newfoundlanders make despoils upon the coast in defiance of the Canadian law, and in the absence of adequate police protection, and carry them off rapidly, thus also largely reducing by wholesale, the supply of sealers' game.

Lastly he complains of the fatal work done along the coast by the whiskey traders and declares that the missionaries are powerless to carry on their good work in the face of brute force used by these ruffians and the demoralization caused among the Indians by their nefarious traffic, which has resulted in the melancholy death of a large number of these poor untutored children of the forest.

He characterizes the liquor traffic as the greatest evil and scourge of the coast, as it not only increases the poverty of the Indians, but is killing them off with alarming rapidity by aggraving the pulmonary and other diseases to which they are peculiarly subject.
