plane early Saturday afternoon. The third man, Ludger Element, 30, an expert bushman who was in the news a year ago when he found two Toronto prospectors in the northern wilds, was located four hours after his companions, mid-way between the lake and his River home, more than 100 miles away. He was trekking home to send word of the plane's location by telegram. All were brought back here and were received at the airport by a crowd of 200.

Newton immediately boarded a plane to go to the bedside of his pregnant wife in a Montreal hospital. They plan to leave for Toronto Monday. The plane was on a return flight from Bloom Lake, 184 miles from here, where Brown was working during a week with Michael and James Walsh, when it ran out of fuel and landed on the small ice-covered lake. The Walsh brothers are the two found by Element and another bush expert last June after they had been lost for nearly a month. Now owners of the Quebec Cohal and Exploration Company, they have been prospecting in the Bloom Lake region, 15 miles from Mont Wright. The plane had gone there to pick up Brown.

Confident of Rescue
Newton said he and his companions were confident of rescue during their long stay in the wilds. "We were flying back to Sept. Iles from around Bloom Lake when the weather turned bad," he said. "When we finally decided we would have to land on the first open spot, we found, I figured that because we were on the direct air route from Goose Bay to Sept. Iles, we would soon be rescued. "We had food enough for two weeks so we were not immediately worried. "We had walked only about a mile when we came on a deserted trapper's cabin. It was equipped with a stove but no food. "Fearing we might run out if rescue didn't come soon, we decided to go after some fish." (Continued on Page 8 Col. 5)

Greeted By Huge Throng In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, May 18 — (CP) — A throng of more than 10,000 packed the sunlit streets of downtown Vancouver today to welcome home 1,137 Canadian soldiers from Korea. The United States Navy transport Pvt. Sadao S. Munemori docked one hour behind schedule after a 15-day voyage from Kure, Japan. The gangplank was shot across at 11 A.M. and three hours later the first troop train pulled out for Montreal. Two others followed at half-hour intervals for Toronto and Ottawa. It was the biggest movement of troops by ship in Vancouver since 1918 when the Empress of Russia brought back Canadians from the battlefields of France through the Panama Canal. After disembarkation, the troops, performing like a precision drill squad, paraded for nine blocks. Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, chief of the army's Western Command, took the salute on the reviewing stand. Maj. J. H. J. Gauthier of Montreal, commander of the shipboard troops, led the parade. The troops came out of the line only about a month ago. They were from nearly all units fighting in Korea, the Royal 22nd Regiment, Royal Canadian Regiment and Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, with supporting services. Movement home of the original Canadian brigade in Korea will be completed early in June. More than 1,000 soldiers will arrive here in about a week and a similar number early next month.

Three men were instantly killed when the Maritime Central Airways plane they were flying crashed late yesterday afternoon in the water at Cartwright, Labrador. It submerged after it hit the surface. Killed were Captain George J. Edwards, First Officer Johnny Dutchak, well known hockey player of the Islanders, and Flight Engineer Clifford MacQuarrie, Victoria, P.E.I. Capt. To Install Microfilm Library Reading Room

Old Island newspaper files and other historic material in the Charlottetown Public Library will shortly be accessible to readers in microfilm. It is planned to fit up about one-half of the basement of the library for this purpose. With microfilm reading equipment which is already on hand at the P. E. I. Library headquarters in Prince of Wales College. The section to be used will be closed off from the rest of the basement, properly ventilated and equipped with steel filing cabinets which extend back to 1800 and earlier. Some of these old papers have already been microfilmed, including the Prince Edward Island Register files, The Islander from 1850 to 1860, and early Nova Scotia and Montreal papers in which Island news appeared. One of the earliest files in the Library's collection, The Island of St. John Gazette, 1791-92, has also been microfilmed and other files are being filmed from time to time. The microfilming is being done at Toronto by the Canadian Library Association, assisted by funds from the Rockefeller Foundation as part of a service available to all public libraries. The films are in small rolls of 35 millimeter, about 3 1/2 inches in diameter, and can be stored very compactly. The master print is retained at Toronto where the files are sent to be filmed, and later returned to the parent library. It is hoped to have the new service installed by late summer or early fall, and there is no doubt but that it will prove of great value and interest to the reading public, particularly students of Island history.

Canadian Soldiers In Clash With Ger...an Civilians

HANNOVER, Germany May 19 — (Reuters) — Three German policemen and an undetermined number of Canadian soldiers and German civilians were injured in a series of clashes between Canadian troops and Germans here during the week-end. The Canadian soldiers had just returned from field manoeuvres, Saturday night about 70 soldiers were involved in the first brawl with a large number of Germans. Shortly afterwards another brawl developed involving about 50 soldiers and later 10 soldiers and 10 civilians fought it out in the vicinity of Jewish cemetery. Civilians and federal police who were trying to restore order charged they were attacked by belt-swinging Canadians. Police also charged that the soldiers tried to overturn a police radio car. Some German civilians joined the Canadians against the police. Eventually British and Canadian military police restored order. A number of Canadian soldiers were arrested. He is survived by his mother.

Solution To Murder And Brink's Robbery Possible

except to say that no charge was placed against him. Powers said the Boston man could not be placed on the scene of the Brink's robbery Jan. 17, 1950, but added "We feel certain he can be convicted as an accessory before the fact." He would not name the witness but said he was relaying the information to Massachusetts Attorney-General Francis E. Kelly. O'Brien and Julius Kenner, 55, Providence jeweller with a criminal record dating to 1915, were named recently, police said, as among the seven or more men who plotted and carried through the Brink's robbery—the United States' biggest cash haul. Kenner is being held in protective custody in Rhode Island. They were "fingered" by Alfred A. Gagnon of Pawtucket, R.I., a prisoner at Rhode Island state prison. He is reported to have told authorities he provided the penknives, halloween masks and rope used by the Brink's bandits. Gagnon, apprehended in Chicago last month, is awaiting trial on a charge of attempted robbery of a Providence diamond merchant.

BOSTON, May 18 — (AP) — Rhode Island authorities came here today with information they hope may lead to solution of the $1,200,000 Brink's robbery two years ago. The shotgun slaying in West Warwick, R.I., early Saturday of Carleton M. O'Brien, 46, a roadhouse operator and ex-convict, set up a chain reaction which police hope will solve both O'Brien's murder and the unexplained hold-up of the Boston money transport firm. The Rhode Island officials said they will question Joseph P. McGinnis, also owner of a night club here and described by police as a former convict. Rhode Island Attorney-General William E. Powers said Saturday night a witness has been located who will testify under oath before a grand jury that he planned the Science lists under Bachelor of Science (H.B.C.) third year, E. A. Lantz, Charlottetown. The Faculty of Agriculture lists under Bachelor of Science (Agr.) third year. C. K. Clay also of Charlottetown.
