ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER XVIII.

'Ah! I was always too hard,' Adam said to himself. 'It's a sore fault in me as I'm so hot and out o' patience with people when they do wrong, and my heart gets shut up against 'em, so as I can't bring myself to forgive 'em. I see clear enough there's more pride nor love in my soul, for I could sooner make a thousand strokes with th' hammer for my father than bring myself to say a kind word to him. And there went plenty o' pride and temper to the strokes, as the devil will be having his finger in what we call our duties as well as our sins. Mayhap the best thing I ever done in my life was only doing what was easiest for myself. It's allays been easier for me to work nor to sit still, but the real tough job for me 'ud be to master my own will and temper, and go right against my own pride. It seems to me now if I was to find father at home to-night, I should behave different; but there's no knowing—perhaps nothing 'ud be a lesson to us if it didn't come too late. It's well we should feel as life's a reckoning we can't make twice over; there's no real making amends in this world, any more nor you can mend a wrong subtraction by doing your addition right.'

This was the key-note to which Adam's thoughts had perpetually returned since his father's death, and the solemn wail of the funeral psalm was only an influence that brought back the old thoughts with stronger emphasis. So was the sermon which Mr. Irwine had chosen with reference to Thias's funeral. It spoke briefly and simply of the words, 'In the midst of life we are in death—how the present moment is all we can call our own for works of mercy, of righteous dealing, and of family tenderness. All very old truths —but what we thought the oldest truth becomes the most startling to us in the week when we had looked on the dead face of one who has made a part of our own lives. For when men want to impress us with the effect of a new and wonderfully vivid light, do they not let it fall on the most familiar object, that we may measure its intensity by remembering the former dimness?

Then came the moment of the final blessing when the ever sublime words, 'The peace of God, which passeth all understanding,' seemed to blend with the calm afternoon sunshine that fell on the bowed heads of the congregation; and then the quiet rising, the mothers tying on the bonnets of the little maidens who had slept through the sermon, the fathers collecting the prayer-books, until all streamed out through the old archway into the green churchyard, and began their neighborly talk, their simple civilities, and their invitations to tea; for on a Sunday everyone was ready to receive a guest—it was a day when all must be in their best clothes, and their best humor.

Mr. and Mrs. Poyser paused a minute at the church gate; they were waiting for Adam to come up, not being contented to go away without saying a kind word to the widow and her sons.

'Mrs. Bede,' said Mrs. Poyser, 'as they walked on together, you must keep your heart; husbands and wives must be content when they've lived to rear their children and see one another's hair gray.'

'Aye, aye,' said Mr. Poyser; 'they wanna have long to wait for one another then, anyhow. And ye've got two o' the strapping at sons in the country; and well you may, for I remembered poor Thias as fine a broad-shouldered fellow as need to be; and as for you, Mrs. Bede, why you're straighter in the back nor half the young women now.'

'Eh!' said Lisbeth, 'it's poor luck for the platter to wear well when it's broke i' two. The sooner I am laid under the thorn the better. I'm no good to nobody now.'

Adam never took notice of his mother's little unjust plants; but Seth said, 'Nay, mother, there mustna say so. Thy sons 'ud never get another mother.'

'That's true, lad—that's true,' said Mr.
Poyser; 'and it's wrong on us to give way to grief, Mrs. Bede, for it's like the children cryin' when the fathers and mothers take things from 'em. There's one above knows better nor us.'

'Ah!' said Mrs. Poyser, 'an' it's poor work always settin' the dead above the livin'. We shall all on us be dead some time, I reckon; it 'ud be better if folks 'ud make much on us beforehand 'stid o' beginnin' when we're gone. It's but little good you'll do a-watering the last year's crop.'

'Well, Adam,' said Mr. Poyser, feeling that his wife's words were, as usual, rather incisive than soothing, and that it would be well to change the subject, 'you'll come and see us again now, I hope. I hauna had a talk with you this long while, and the miss is here wants you to see what can be done with her best spinning-wheel, for it's got broke, and it'll be a nice job to mend it, there'll want a bit o' turning. You'll come as soon as you can, now, will you?' would be given spontaneously; for Mr.

Craig, like a superior man, was very fond of giving information.

Prince County Exports for 1884.

The shipping and export returns for the port of Summerside for 1884 are as follows:—

There were 8 vessels entered from foreign and 334 from Dominion ports, while 16 vessels cleared to foreign and 338 to ports within the Dominion. Of the ships that entered and cleared from and to foreign ports all were laden. Of vessels sailing between this and Dominion ports some were in cargo and some in ballast.
In addition to these the mail steamers made 173 trips between Summerside and Point du Chene, and 30 to Charlottetown. There are many reasons to assign for the falling off in our exports last year, as compared with the two years previous. Perhaps the principal cause was the low market prices paid to farmers for their produce.
Again, the potato crop did not yield over half the number of bushels to the square acre that were turned out in 1882 and 1883. The spring was far advanced before the opening of navigation, as the following extract from THE DAILY EXAMINER of the 15th May last shows:—"The state of our coast at this season of the year is almost unprecedented.
It is particularly felt at the west end of the Island, where not even irregular communication can be commenced," etc. As a result of this state of things some of the exports which would otherwise be credited to this county were shipped from Charlottetown, and will be accounted for in the exports of Queen's County. The correctness of this statement is shown from another paragraph of THE DAILY EXAMINER of the date above-mentioned which reads thus:—"Mr. Smallwood brought eighteen fine horses from Summerside yesterday, and shipped them via Pictou to the United States."

The following summary report will be found correct:—

583 552 bushels oats	$205,213
50,872 bush potatoes	12,258
12,443 cases eggs	53,102

Mr. Edmund Yates, in a late number of his World, praises the new "society" device whereby at balls the hostess protects herself and guests against what he calls the wallflower masquerade or the supper-hunting-young-men-of-the-period, who are as common in New York as in London. She hands to dancers a blue ticket entitling them to a champagne supper, but to the wallflower a pink ticket as a case of "no waltz, no supper," allowing him only lemonade and a biscuit.

Mr. Booth's recent engagement of four weeks at the Boston Museum showed receipts of over $40,000, and the receipts of Mr. Boucicault's five weeks' engagement at the same theatre are expected to reach not far from $35,000. The brief season of Italian opera at the Boston Theatre was a great financial success, the receipts for the two Patti nights alone reaching some $20,000. At all the other Boston theatres a satisfactory business is being done, and the signs of hard times are not apparent.

The amounts won by some leading American turfmen last season is reckoned by a sporting correspondent of the Montreal Herald. Pierre Lorillard, thanks to his fast mares out of Motimer, especially Wanda, who brought him in some $18,000 in one race, heads the list with the handsome sum of $4,000; then comes the "Lorillard of the West," E. Corrigan with $71,765; next, the Dwyers, with $63,102; then George L. Lovelland with $17,135. From that point the long list dwindles gradually until it sinks to $25.

At a preliminary meeting in Halifax on Tuesday evening an influential joint committee, representing the King's and Dalhousie colleges, was appointed to collect information and report at another meeting to be called by them. Several speakers expressed the hope that the movement may result in the federation of all the Nova Scotia colleges.
