Death Closes Career of Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Death has closed the career of Bernard Kiebs Sandwell, 78, celebrated Canadian editor-economist, lecturer and wit. His initials B. K. S. were familiar to thousands. Mr. Sandwell died Wednesday at his home of cancer barely two weeks after his last column, written with characteristic urbanity and humor, appeared Nov. 20 in the Financial Post. He had joined the Maclean-Hunter publication a year ago after retirement from his 19-year-long editorship of Saturday Night. It was as editor-in-chief of Saturday Night that Mr. Sandwell became a public figure, an editor who used the platform and microphone as deftly as his typewriter to provoke reaction to his view on the passing scene.

U. N. Votes To Take Up Case of American Airmen

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (CP) — Canadian, British and United States delegation leaders Wednesday won assembly consideration of a complaint by the Korean allies against Red China's imprisonment of 11 American fliers as spies. The General Assembly voted 48 to 5 (Soviet bloc) to place the complaint on its agenda after hearing L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister. U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge and Britain's Anthony Nutting argue for inscription of the item. Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia argued against inscription. Pearson said the case of the prisoners "is a challenge to our deepest convictions as to the rights of human beings" and charged Red China with violating not only the Korean armistice, but "our deepest humanitarian instincts" in imprisoning the fliers. DEBATE AT ONCE Following the vote on inscription, the assembly then voted 44 to 5 (Soviet bloc) to begin the debate at once without adjourning and without the usual committee action. Lodge then asked the assembly to adopt the resolution "by an overwhelming vote." The resolution would ask Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold to use "continuing and unremitting efforts" to obtain the release of the prisoners and report back by Dec. 31 on what had been accomplished.

Death Closes Career of Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Death has closed the career of Bernard Kiebs Sandwell, 78, celebrated Canadian editor-economist, lecturer and wit. His initials B. K. S. were familiar to thousands. Mr. Sandwell died Wednesday at his home of cancer barely two weeks after his last column, written with characteristic urbanity and humor, appeared Nov. 20 in the Financial Post. He had joined the Maclean-Hunter publication a year ago after retirement from his 19-year-long editorship of Saturday Night. It was as editor-in-chief of Saturday Night that Mr. Sandwell became a public figure, an editor who used the platform and microphone as deftly as his typewriter to provoke reaction to his view on the passing scene.

U. N. Votes To Take Up Case of American Airmen

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (CP) — Canadian, British and United States delegation leaders Wednesday won assembly consideration of a complaint by the Korean allies against Red China's imprisonment of 11 American fliers as spies. The General Assembly voted 48 to 5 (Soviet bloc) to place the complaint on its agenda after hearing L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister. U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge and Britain's Anthony Nutting argue for inscription of the item. Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia argued against inscription. Pearson said the case of the prisoners "is a challenge to our deepest convictions as to the rights of human beings" and charged Red China with violating not only the Korean armistice, but "our deepest humanitarian instincts" in imprisoning the fliers. DEBATE AT ONCE Following the vote on inscription, the assembly then voted 44 to 5 (Soviet bloc) to begin the debate at once without adjourning and without the usual committee action. Lodge then asked the assembly to adopt the resolution "by an overwhelming vote." The resolution would ask Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold to use "continuing and unremitting efforts" to obtain the release of the prisoners and report back by Dec. 31 on what had been accomplished.
