MOTHER'S OUTING. "My, but it seems good to get home again, and eat some mother's cooking!" Jeannette was home from the city on a vacation. "Shut 'taint better a city boarding house cooking, is it, Net?" asked her father with a chuckle. "Well, I guess," cried Jeannette. "I suppose that is the way young ladies in a school of dressmaking, especially a Brother Fred, who was some what critical of the conduct and speech of girls. Jeannette was too busy with her dinner to reply. "Well, I know something how you feel, Net," said Mr. Goodwin, as he spread another slice of bread and helped himself to a second dish of strawberries. "I know how 'twas when I went to Boston for three weeks last Winter. Of course everything was real nice at your Uncle Will's, but land 'twasn't like mother's cooking. And the first night I came back mother took away all the Johnny cake before I had near enough. A pleasant expression flashed across Mrs. Goodwin's worn face. She was a little woman, slender and with bent shoulders. The expression of determination and her eyes and mouth told plainly why it was that she was habitually able to do more than seemed possible from her frail bodily appearance.

"Yes," ruminatingly went on Mr. Goodwin, "we're all glad to get home again—except Fred. This was accompanied with a very expressive chuckle and significant eye glance. Fred blushed with annoyance as he always did when he was thus reminded of his experience of his own about a year before. Having at that time come to the conclusion that farming was a somewhat slow way to make a fortune he had prevailed upon his father to allow him to try the city, where he was sure he would meet with the most glorious success. In a short time he was at home again, trunk and all, and forthwith settled down to study and farmwork in a truly admirable manner. Since that time Farmer Goodwin has enthusiastically prescribed this formula for keeping boys on the farm: "Just let 'em go off to the city to seek their fortunes. Don't be too set against it, because that'll make 'em want to go all the more, and might make 'em too proud to come back if they fail. Just tell 'em you don't mind their trying what they can do, and if they don't succeed, why they can come right back to the old farm again."

"We have all tried going off and coming home," said Jeannette, thoughtfully. "Mother," incredulously cried her father, "why, you couldn't get her off this farm for anything. She's been here for years, and she's never seen a night away from home in all her life," said Fred. "Did too," said Mr. Goodwin, "Five years ago I went to New York to visit Sue's folks. Stayed two days and nights, and you couldn't get me to leave home again. A little later Jeannette went out in the field, where her father and Fred were at work, and told them of a little plant that she had been thinking about for some time. Her father smiled incredulously. "It couldn't be done," he said. "I wouldn't go. Even if she wouldn't pay Twenty-five dollars for a single week! I couldn't afford it." "Besides, wouldn't do mother any good," said Fred, loftily. "She'd be miserable all the while she was gone." "But you don't understand," protested Jeannette. "Mother has never known what it was to be free from care for a single night. Whenever she has been visiting it has been to help somebody else. See how worn she looks! The things that fill us with interest and enthusiasm she cares nothing for. It's because her mind is so tired, with never any change in her life. One set of nerves has been used for years. It's because they had a rest, and she's never used. But she isn't conscious of all this. What I want is for us to persuade her to go away for a good rest. "I don't see how I can make her conscious of it if I'm not conscious of it myself," Fred sniffed. "I'll tell you what I'll do," said her father presently. "I'll begin with, I guess you're wrong. Mother's about old enough to know what she wants, and what'll do her good. But if you can make her do what you say for a single week, and you'll pay all her expenses, you want to pay half anyway, you say—why, I'll pay the whole amount right back to you. You'll find out if it's done her good. But you'll have to take the risk. Besides there mustn't be any imaginings that it's done her good, or anything half way. You must tell her own self right out, if it has done her good, and if she enjoyed it."

"Net," a bi-rose to throw her money away like that," said Fred with another sniff. "I might well burn it right up as one. Making mother do something that'll make her miserable!" "You wait and see," called back Jeannette, going into the house again. That night at supper-table mother was almost ill-natured. "Why, mother," protested Mr. Goodwin, "what in the world's the matter? Kinder tucked out, ain't you?" "Well, yes, I am," said Mrs. Goodwin. "Net's in a state of exasperation. Here she's been and bought tickets to Block Island and return, and engaged a room for a week at the house where the Packards are, and now she's changed her mind and won't go. She says I've got to go!" "When?" exclaimed Father Goodwin, looking at Jeannette in evident admiration of her plan of proceeding. Jeannette shook her head warningly at her father for fear he would say too much, and remarked, quietly: "Yes, I bought the tickets a month ago, and engaged the room, but have changed my mind about going, and want to stay in Kingston this summer."

ANOTHER DISCOVERY. Of Interest to Bicycle Riders. A well known bicycle rider has made a discovery that will be good news to all who locomote on the wheel. He says: "Since I first began to ride a wheel, which is several years ago, I have been subject to more or less chafing and irritation. Sometimes when heated the itching inside my legs would be so severe that I would feel compelled to forego riding for a time. Nothing that I tried did any material good until my attention was drawn to an advertisement of Dr. Chase's Ointment for all itching of the skin. I tried it and almost from the moment it touched the skin the itching stopped. I also find its occasional use prevents chafing. Further evidence of the efficacy of this preparation is given by Chas. Roe, foreman Central Press Agency, Toronto, who was troubled with itching skin of the most aggravated kind. When the skin became heated during sleep from too much clothing, would wake up with absolute pain from digging into the flesh with his nails. Chase's Ointment gave relief from the first application and permanently cured. Price 60c."

SHE HAS BACKACHE. Feels sore aches with muscular Pains, and has just put on that Banisher of Backaches THE 922 MENOR PLASTER. J. GRATIFYING INTELLIGENCE. Word Received of the Complete Recovery of Mrs. John Dowly. OWEN SCOTT, June 21.—Word has been received here of the complete restoration to health of Mrs. John Dowly, wife of a former well known and esteemed resident of the town. The intelligence has been very gladly received as Mrs. Dowly has many friends here who are well aware of the lamentable condition of her health during the past six or seven years. Her illness has been found to result from a severe kidney complaint and she has been restored to health by the judicious use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which is now well known to most of the residents in this locality as having previously effected in some cases very extraordinary cures.

Science Triumphant at Last. Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the outcome of the latest scientific researches. There was always a prejudice against taking Cod Liver Oil on account of its disagreeable taste, but Miller's Emulsion is agreeable to the palate, and that is one reason why it has become so popular with the medical fraternity, the hospitals of the country and the households wherever consumption and lung troubles prevail. Miller's Emulsion is the greatest strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottle, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores. Many a Young Man. When from over-work, possibly assisted by an inherited weakness, the health fails and rest or medical treatment meet no reported, then no medicine can be employed with the same beneficial results as Scott's Emulsion.
