SAIGON (AP)—Appointment of Lt.-Gen. William C. Westmoreland as commander of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam was seen here Sunday as pressaging a new and tougher U.S. policy in this Southeast Asian nation.

President Johnson announced in Washington Saturday that Westmoreland would succeed Gen. Paul D. Harkins Aug. 1. Westmoreland has been in South Viet Nam as Harkins's deputy for the last three months and his appointment came as no surprise.

U.S. Satellite Will Probe Wreckage Of Exploded Star

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy is planning to launch a rocket this summer to hunt for "wreckage" of a star that exploded in 1054.

This was reported Monday by a naval research laboratory astronomer who said that the novel experiment is designed to prove or disprove this theory.

That mysterious, celestial x-rays, discovered last summer by another rocket flight, are generated "neutron stars." These are believed to be the ultimate remnants of supernovae, or exploding stars.

Dr. Herbert Friedman, in a report prepared for the 101st annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, said the oddball x-rays—so "soft" that they couldn't penetrate a piece of paper—were discovered coming from the general vicinity of the constellation Scorpius and of the Crab Nebula, in widely separated sectors of the Milky Way.

And he said navy scientists believe the x-rays may be the far flung, invisible fingerprints of tiny but extremely hot and heavy stars made up entirely of neutrons — stars that are the final collapsed wreckage of giant stars that exploded about 1,000 to 2,000 years ago.

ONE BILLION DEGREES

It's believed that the "neutron stars" may have only a diameter of 10 miles, but burn with temperatures exceeding 1,000,000,000 degrees.

Exploding stars which could have left such heavily wreckage are known to have occurred in the bailiwicks of both Scorpius and the Crab Nebula.

Scorpius entertained such fireworks in the year 134 B.C., and in the year 436 A.D., 891 A.D. and 1584 A.D. and the gaseous Crab Nebula itself is a major remnant of supernova that thrilled Chinese and Japanese astronomers in the year 1054 A.D.

This summer's rocket experiment is specifically designed to determine if, indeed, there is "neutron star" wreckage in the vicinity of the Crab Nebula.
