MR. AND MRS. ELMER GALLANT

Double Ring Ceremony Unites Popular Couple

On August 12, 1953, St. Augustine's Church in South Rustico was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Louise Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Peters and Mr. Elmer Gallant, son of Mrs. Mary Gallant, both of South Rustico, were united in marriage by Father Joseph LeClair in a double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Clifford Doucette, the bride was gowned in nylon net fashioned with a lace overskirt and bolero with tapered sleeves. Her chapel veil was of bridal illusion with coronet headdress of nylon chiffon, trimmed with sequins and rhinestones. She carried a bridal bouquet of red roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Lorraine Blanchard was in an orchid ballerina length gown with matching picture hat and the bridesmaid, Miss Eileen Gallant, sister of the groom, wore a pink ballerina gown with matching picture hat and carried a bouquet of fashioned bouquets of garden flowers.

The flower girl was little Linda Gauthier, who wore a gown of yellow taffeta and nylon, yellow bonnet and carried a nosegay of yellow flowers.

Mr. Bernard Blanchard was best man, James Gallant and Auburn Pineau were ushers. Miss Audrey Gallant was at the organ to accompany the choir and Miss Helen Gallant the soloist who rendered "Mother at Your Feet We're Kneeling", at the close of the mass.

A reception breakfast followed at the Queen Hotel in Charlottetown for the wedding guests, where the mother of the bride, Mrs. Peters was in a light blue ensemble with matching hat and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Gallant, mother of the groom, wore a blue print dress with white hat and a corsage of pink roses. Miss Leigh Blanchard was in charge of the guest book.

Along with the many guests from the province were Mrs. Maude Banville of Arlington, Mass., Miss Mary Houlehan of Halifax, Nova Scotia and Mrs. Peter Blanchard and daughter Leigh of Natik, Mass.

Following the reception, the young couple left on a tour of Maritimes with the bride changing to a blue nylon dress with white accessories for the wedding trip.

Before their marriage, Mrs. Gallant was employed by the Royal Bank of Canada in Charlottetown and the groom is employed by Mrs. Lena Craswell of Rustico.

Two showers were held for the bride before the wedding, one by the girls of the Royal Bank of Canada and one by Mr. and Mrs. Augustine Blanchard in Rustico. Photo by Margaret Mallett.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

Preparing For The Later Years Is Complicated

By Ruhama S. Frank

Last week's column, Prepare in Summer (for the later years) found more than the average response. Perhaps because readers concerned with the more serious subjects—and certainly with problems of aging are generally speaking, themselves no longer young. "Can you tell us a little more, can you suggest more about how we can prepare for our — less active years?" several of these readers asked. Not as simple as saving money

Last week (in my column) Mr. X. indicated that plans should be made for the — less robust years in the same way money is set aside for endowment policies, or life insurance. But saving money, difficult though it may be, is a simple process compared with understanding oneself — one's assets and liabilities — and patiently cultivating the assets for an unpredictable future. Saving money, like earning money (and the two abilities do not necessarily go together) is a special characteristic. Planning, evaluating, persisting in a plan year after year involve the entire personality. And since no two personalities are alike, and no two situations are the same, there can be no set pattern to follow in one's prime to achieve a satisfactory way of life in the declining years.

BUSINESS OF ONE'S OWN
Those who have a business—no matter how modest it is—shows a profit—seem to have a longer lease or active life than most others. They certainly avoid the tension and frustration that come to an individual when he is forcibly "retired" at a time when he can still carry on. Mr. A., a long-time clerk in town in facing the fact that his growing deafness is being noticed and it won't be long before he will be asked to leave his job. "How thankful I am," he told me, "that for once I listened to my wife and we started this little upholstery business. She is good with her needle and I'm pretty handy at fixing things. I enjoy it too. We don't get much out of it but with our old age pensions we'll get along. And both of us will feel useful."

PROFESSIONS
Professions pay off in extending the period of usefulness — and who can call himself "old" when his or she is still practicing medicine, nursing, law — or teaching. Young people will probably not consider this factor but parents can sometimes persuade them to continue their education when they are impatient to begin "earning."

FARMING
Farming may not be the most profitable of venture now but no one can deny it is still the most basic industry. If every other business would close, men could continue to live—if the farmer piled his trade! For those who enjoy farming—and there are a great many—what is so desirable as a plot of land—even of an acre or two, to plant, to watch grow—to give one a hundred little chores that even frail old bodies can perform?

ODD JOBS
I do believe there should be some agency — subsidized by thoughtful people if not by the government, just for aging folks. There are a great many jobs that need doing and are not profitable enough for the able-bodied to do. This would be different from the ordinary "unemployment agency." It would specialize not only in work or the older but in kindness—and an interest in their welfare!

TO BILL LAGGARDS

TORONTO (CP) — Suburban North York board of education's curriculum and management committee Thursday night recommended tuition fees be charged students who spend more than six years in high schools. They would pay $237 a year, the township's cost of educating a student for one year. The recommendation is to go to the board Sept. 22.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Cozy Evenings At Home Black Cat And All Enjoy

The black cat reclining on his cushion looks up in the stillness obtaining, and weancy remarks, "Now this is my idea of a cozy evening! You there, James — in the armchair and I on the couch. You know Missis' he confides "Summer is a grand season, but there's also something to be said in favor of autumn besides its rare color and tonight is reminding of autumn. All summer the heart was out outdoors, but now with a chill in the air it turns once more to the joys within."

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen" the black cat remarks whimsically into the ensuing silence. "The saddest are these it might have been! 'But why wasn't it otherwise?' he grins. "That's the everlasting conundrum."

"I see 'James observes 'the price of hogs has slipped a bit more. 'The seasonal decline it says. 'He brings his paper down to more convenient eye level. It's just as well we have none to go at present with the price of feed so high."

Did you remember, Ellen, when the wind swung north this afternoon to close the piggery door when we were in the field? Good! I was thinking you would. It's a wonder they're not showing up that first litter. It must be about time, I'd say.

"It's to be hoped we have good luck" we comment. "It's a pity we didn't make a

"Oh never fear about that 'The chuckles. 'There are usually fine litters when the price of hogs is slipping!"

"Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday yes, this is Wednesday" the black cat grins "my night to tip-toe down the shortcut to the mill. But" he yawns indifferently as he surveys the diamond-drops on the window beside him "Who would go abroad on a night like this when he has every comfort indoors: Not I... or shall I? To be honest I'm between two opinions. After all 'he smiles shyly "I guess a tryst is a tryst. Oh well the night is young yet I'll have another nap."

"Did you ever hear the like of that!" James offers looking up. "Another shower! Not unlike a fall-night, this. And so lovely a morning, we had."

Yes, so lovely a morning. Dawned in rose and gold above the quiet hills. But tonight is fall-like with its rain and dark at the windows. How pleasant against it is the crackling fire on the hearth!

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good Night.....

EATON'S Presents The Fluid Line

a new concept of shape

Lithe, young and mobile... it is a subtle shaping with becoming ways.

Fluid lines are artfully eased into three major silhouettes... the Swing with narrowed shoulders widening to a rounded hemline... the Mobile, a slender shaft with a feeling of motion and the Directoire with fluid lines falling from a high waistline. Hemlines are cropped to just below the knee.

In fabrics, wools change their personality. They are looped, curled or brushed to a new bulky look that is feather-light. Mohair is a great success. These new surfaces are most exciting when they're printed! Crapes and silks have a dimensional effect.

The fashion impact of mosaic colours lends vitality to new fabrics and silhouettes. The spectrum runs from burnished browns to terracotta... Italian moss green to Roman gold... shock Medici pink to clear Venetian red and from Capri blue to royal plum.

Hats are deep-crowned casuals, tall tilted versions or a wig-gy look in furs and feathers. Soft, pouchy bags... mobile jewellery... shoes with straps or ghillie ties and tinted hosiery complete the silhouettes.

This is the new fashion look for autumn — it is becoming. Eaton's endorses it with impressive, beautiful collections!

Coats priced	29.95 to 110.00
Suits priced	29.95 to 85.00
