A CONSERVATIVE VICTORY.

Lord Charles Beresford Elected.

EXCITING CONTEST IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The parliamentary bye election held in York County, yesterday, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Liberal member, resulted in the election of Lord Charles Beresford, a Conservative and Liberal-Unionist candidate, by a majority of 11 votes over his Liberal and Radical opponent, Sir Christopher Furness.

Lord Charles Beresford's victory marks the first gain of a seat by the Government since the last general election. There was much excitement.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Duty on Binder Twine.

A Big Cut in the Estimates.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—The Government is between the devil and the deep sea on the binder twine question. Another deputation of Liberals saw Hon. Mr. Fielding yesterday on behalf of the Farmers' Binding Company, of Brantford, an establishment started to fight the combine which has been a great success. They say that unless they get a protection of 2½ per cent. they must close down. It is semi-officially announced that there will be a big cut in the estimates for next year.

Our Premier's Movements.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—Premier Warburton called on the Governor General yesterday, and will leave for Hamilton this evening, returning to Ottawa before leaving for home. He is here on private business.

Suicide.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Daily Mail says that Sir Charles Arthur Cunningham committed suicide at the Hotel Victoria on December 26th, announced at the time as a natural death.

Sudden Death.

MONCTON, Jan. 14.—Adolphus L. Mitchell, engineer, of the Canadian Pacific Railway shops, was attacked with a rush of blood to the head yesterday and died.

The United States is yet very far from being done with the silver issue. The cheap money movement is receiving recruits from the ranks of its political opponents. One of the latest of these is Mr. Wm. E. Chandler, the Republican representative of New Hampshire in the Senate. Senator Chandler's argument is that the demonetization of silver and the consequent appreciation of gold have contributed to reduce the prices of commodities and curtail the rewards of labor. There is more in the same sense, the idea of which was condensed into Mr. Bryan's exclamation "You shall not crucify labor on a cross of gold!" It is the greenbacks that Senator Chandler immediately desires to save; but his declaration is an argument for silver, and as such it will be understood.

This is a Bookstore

Several other lines of business live under this same roof, each of them the largest of its kind in this Province. But, first and foremost, this is a BOOKSTORE, and especially it is a SCHOOL BOOK DEPOT. All the authorized School and College Books are kept in stock, and a big stock of all School Requisites, and the prices are always as low as the lowest. Need we say more?

THE DRUNKARD'S SERMON.
 It Was Addressed to Two Gilded Youths Before a Saloon Bar.

It was growing late. The tide of humanity that earlier in the evening had ebbed and flowed through the streets of the great city had swept onward, leaving the strange and almost appalling sense of desolation that comes when the noises of the town are hushed. The electric lights flared unnoted on the corners, the street cars passed at farther intervals, now and then a night worker hurried by, his footsteps ringing out loud and clear in the stillness. In front of a saloon whose lights shone out bright and ruddy across the pavement stood a tramp, unshorn, ragged, dirty, disgusting. He watched with envious eyes the men who passed in and out through the swinging doors, and then he turned his eyes toward two young fellows in evening dress, who were coming down the street toward him. They had been drinking deeply, and they stopped before the saloon door and looked curiously at him. "By Jove," said one, "think of having a thirst like that and not the price of an extinguisher in your pocket! Beats old Tantalus all to pieces, eh? Liquor, liquor, everywhere, and not a drop to drink." He ran his hand into his pocket and proffered the tramp a dime, but before he could he accepted the other young fellow interposed. "Say," he said, "let's do the good Samaritan and set Hobo up to a good drink." The other hilariously consented, and the tramp slouched into the saloon at the heels of the two gilded youths. The barkeeper set before them glasses and liquors, and with the tramp poured out a brimming glass, and raised it to his lips. "Stop," cried one of the young men drunkenly, "make us a speech. It is poor liquor that doesn't unloosen a man's tongue." The tramp hastily swallowed down the drink, and as the rich liquor coursed through his blood he straightened himself and stood before them with a grace and dignity that all his rags and dirt could not obscure. "Gentlemen," he said, "I look tonight at you and at myself, and it seems to me I look upon the picture of my lost manhood. This bloated face was once as young and handsome as yours. This shambling figure once walked as proudly as yours, a man in a world of men. I, too, once had home, and friends, and position. I had a wife as beautiful as an artist's dream, and I dropped the priceless pearl of her honor and respect in the wine cup, and Cleopatra-like, saw it dissolve, and quaffed it down in the brimming draught. I had children as sweet and lovely as the flowers of spring and I saw them fade and die under the blighting curse of a drunkard father. I had a home where love lit the flame upon the altar and ministered before it, and I put out the holy fire, and darkness and desolation reigned in its stead. I had aspirations that soared as high as the morning star, and I broke and bruised their beautiful wings, and at last, strangled them that I might be tortured with their cries no more. To day I am a husband without a wife, a father without a child, a tramp with no home to call his own, a man in whom every good impulse is dead. All, all shallowed up in the maelstrom of drink." The tramp ceased speaking. The glass fell from his nerveless fingers and shivered into a thousand fragments on the floor. The swinging doors pushed open and shut to again, and when the little group about the bar looked up the tramp was gone.

A HAND THAT SHOCK
