UNITED STATES.

WEBSTER HAS CONFESSED.—Papers reveived by the R. M. S. Cambria at this port on Saturday evening, from New York, contain the confession of Professor Webster that he killed Dr. Parkman—but denies the act to have been murder. On the 23rd May last Webster confessed to Dr. Putman, his spiritual adviser, that according to agreement Parkman came to the College—used insulting language—that he Prof. Webster being thus exasperated seized a billet of wood and dealt him a blow on the side of the head which immediately proved fatal. He then tried without success to resuscitate Dr. P. but in vain. The deed being done, the first idea that seized the mind of the unhappy Webster was concealment. With this conslusion begins the long tissue of falsehood on the part of Prof. Webster. His strange conduct when arrested is accounted for by the fact that when he found himself about to be committed to the jail he took a strong dose of poison—which Webster thinks was only hindered from proving fatal by the then state of his nervous system. Prof. Webster in his confession proves, satisfactorily we think, that the death of Dr. Parkman could not possibly have been premeditated—giving as illustrations, the previous arrangements with his banker, &c. There is nothing further as to the fate of the unfortunate Professor.

The argument in the Court of Error in the case of the above unfortunate man, has terminated adversely for him, and however much we may have been startled at the contrast exhibited in the trial betore the Jury, and the practice of the Courts which we have visited, in respect of the introduction of evidence, no one can deny that the decision of Chief Justice Shaw in discharging the writ of error is an able argument, and the production of a sound clear headed lawyer.

Nothing now intervenes to stay the execution of the sentence of death upon the prisoner, but the action of the Executive. Many petitions numerously signed have been laid before them, and we understand that on Tuesday last Gov. Briggs was to meet the counsel for the purpose of deciding in the matter, and in all probability the last acts of this mournful tragedy is ere this announced to the American public.

THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION.

We observe that the Colonist is again dealing in misrepresentations. The scribblers want sadly to know what is to pay the expenses of the Speaker's mission to Washington; we dare say the question will be answered in good time. The Colonist is dreadfully alarmed lest our Fisheries should be given up to the Americans without an equivalant. He may calm his fears—for the Legislature alone can finally deal with the question.—He would also like to know the nature of the memoranda prepared by the hon. Speaker for the information of the British Minister at Washington. Sir Henry is not the man to place the candle under a bushel; we fully expect the public at large will have the gratification of perusing the question. The organ is frantic at the idea of the Fisherman's interests being confided to the First Commoner—seeing as these incorrigibles profess to believe, that gentleman knows nothing at all about the matter! We beg to assure the wiseacres that, with the exception of the Hon. Attorney General, no man in British North America is better acquainted with the actual condition of our Fsheries, more deeply estimates their importance, or takes a more lively interest in the well being of the hardy fellows along our coasts, than the hon. Speaker of the Nova Scotia Assembly. In order that we may better soothe the indignation of our contemporary we take the liberty of reminding him of a fact, with which he must necessarily be acquainted, namely, that the several Colonial Governments, have been, by Imperial order, prevented from officially corresponding with the United States' Government on this vitally interesting topic—the Reciprocity Question. We think Sir Henry Bulwer has evinced a sound discretion, and extreme good taste, in so readily lending an ear to the several gentlemen who have represented to him the wants of these Colonies.—Nov.
