

Delegates To Meeting On Forest Industry Critical

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor WINNIPEG (CP) — Governments, the forest industry and the general public all took a beating at Monday's sessions of the national forestry conference.

Governments were blamed for being niggardly in providing money for forest development; the industry was blamed for not getting the forest industry and the public; and the public was blamed for being apathetic concerning one of its chief sources of livelihood.

On top of this, Canadian lumbermen were warned that Russia might virtually put them out of the lumber export business.

The make-up of the conference itself also took a blast.

H. R. MacMillan, Vancouver forest industrialist, said forest revenues now were being used to support welfare, public works and education. Only pressure from the public would make governments put a fair share back into the forests themselves.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH
Referring to the fact that most of those attending the conference are connected with the forest industry in some way, Mr. Mac-Millan declared:

"This meeting is not good enough. We are merely talking to ourselves."

Mr. MacMillan suggested that the present gathering be used as a base to plan another appeal to the public, and favored another meeting in Ottawa which might be called by the prime minister or other appropriate authority.

He also suggested that the Canadian Forestry Association, which had called the meeting, might review its objectives. He believed it was running along on a program adopted years ago which was not having much effect upon the public except in the fields of fire and game.

NEED PUBLIC
R. L. Weldon of Montreal, president of Bathurst Pulp and Paper Co. Ltd., said it wasn't enough for foresters to do their jobs well; they must also carry their story to the public. If another conference could be arranged it should be a truly national public meeting.

W. J. Leclair of Ottawa, secretary - manager of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, who recently returned from a tour of Russian lumbering operations, said he was "thoroughly frightened" by what he saw.

Russia, he said, was spending immense amounts of money on its forests. In the last five years she had reorganized the industry and changed it from a seasonal to a year-round basis.

"Canadians," Mr. Leclair declared, "are too complacent. We need a bomb to make us realize that we will be completely out of competition in a few years unless we wake up."

"We may be thankful that Russia has had to rebuild its own country and so has been the biggest users of its own production.
If, as and when she turns to competition in world markets we will be behind the eight-ball."

SETS OFF DISCUSSION
The lively discussion session was set off by Lowell Besley of Montreal, chairman of the woodlands research department of the Pulp and Paper Research Institute of Canada.

Mr. Besley said that the completely scientifically-managed forest is practically non-existent in Canada today.

It was not, however, far off, if a working partnership could be established between industry and governments. Much of the groundwork had already been laid.

He put the blame for delay on the public—through their federal and provincial representatives.

The federal government, which was getting $200,000,000 a year in tax revenues from forest industries, was spending in return less than $10,000,000 and tax policies discouraged proper forest use and development.

In the provincial field a large part of the energies of provincial forest services was devoted to collecting money for the provincial treasuries.

A prime requirement was to inform the public and their representatives of the value of the forest resources to the Canadian people and the way in which these values could be maintained and increased.

Devines Water, Might Be 400 Feet To Dig

EDMONTON (CP) — Don Belknap, an expert water diver, claims to have located more than 1,000 wells in Alberta since 1900.
He has never failed to find water. His tools are a forked switch, a spade, a pick and a windlass.
Spry, 74-year-old Don Belknap learned his art in South Dakota in 1888. He saw a diviner locate a well on his uncle's farm and decided to try it himself.
He learned that he had the "gift," as he terms it, when he stood over a proved well and watched his switch jerk downwards to indicate water.
