

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

NOVEMBER 27, 1895.

MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.

ACCORDING to promise, Parliament is called for the despatch of business on Thursday, the 2nd January, 1896. The legislation of the country will thus be done early in the year, and our politicians will be free to go on with the canvass. The case for the Government will be strengthened by their candid speeches and straightforward conduct in respect to the Manitoba school question, as well as by their honest and careful administration of affairs. Parliament will, besides the transaction of its ordinary business, have to dispose of the Manitoba School Question—unless the Government and Legislature shall do so in the meantime. It may be that the case will come down at the last moment. In any case, the Government will be upheld if the duty that is forced upon it is done in accordance with the law and with good sense.

THE MANITOBA QUESTION.

THE STATE of Montreal, strongly deprecates the shouldering of all other issues into background by the Manitoba School question, and says: "The responsibility of the Manitoba Government under the circumstances is most grave. It can turn a business meeting of the electors to be held at the polls shortly into a sectarian debating club; and, on the other hand, it can leave that meeting to do the nation's business in peace. Mr. Greenway has come into our politics with his disturbing question at a critical time. The hand of the great statesman which had not been far from the helm of state for over three decades has fallen away from the wheel since the present Parliament was elected. We are now almost to choose our rulers and policy for the first time as a Confederation without the help of Sir John Macdonald. Mr. Alexander Mackenzie and Mr. Blake were also lost to us about the same time. There is no thought of fear for the future; but the day when we must test new helmsmen is not the best time to attempt new and difficult changes. Mr. Greenway, however, has now the opportunity to save us this strain. That his Government has been unjust to the minority is practically admitted by all save those who regard separate schools as so great an evil that they think it right to rid a people of them by force and against its will. The Privy Council has declared the minority to have a grievance. So eminent an authority as Principal Grant reports them to have been most harshly used. The best that the most violent supporter of the Greenway law can say is that the unjust "means" are justified by the righteous "end"—a sort of religious fanaticism which he can easily do by a compromise measure coupling a common state inspection with varied religious instruction—and he will set Manitoba right before the Privy Council and the public eye in Canada. A hurtful and profane religious-political campaign.

Should Mr. Greenway decline to do this much justice, all the suffering will fall upon the rest of the province—where, in fact, he is bound up with the Dominion, and a national jury will weigh him as well as the other provinces. Let Canada be so confused by this school controversy that she blunders on other issues at the general election—where material hurt, and the Manitoba farmer will be one of the first sufferers. Should united and harmonious action among our people for the upbuilding of the country become more difficult because of bitter feelings, aroused over this question, what part will suffer more surely and more severely than the new provinces, with their empty acres and their meagre public works? What if a religious division had palsied progress when the C. P. R. was about to be built—what would then have become of Manitoba? There is usually not much to be gained by appealing to political gratitude, but if such a plea should possess power, there is ground enough for it in the relations of old Canada with the West to justify us in asking that our politics be not convulsed with a local question, at this critical time. But such a plea is unnecessary for Manitoba has much to lose in the present and the future from associating her name with what must be a political nuisance.

It is to be hoped that this independent and forcible representation of the case will cause Mr. Greenway and his grit allies to change their plan of attack upon the Dominion Government. If Sir Mackenzie Powell is to be ousted, let it be on a count of a question of Dominion politics—not on account of a Provincial difficulty brought about by unwarrantable acts on the part of Premier Greenway and his colleagues, for which the Dominion Parliament is, in the last resort, compelled to provide a remedy.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Benjamin Harrison says, in the Ladies' Home Journal for December, that "a greater reverence for law is a sore need in this land of ours." The German Emperor has expressed his firm belief that peace will be maintained. This, taken in connection with Lord Salisbury's Guildhall speech, ought to be reassuring. Sherbrooke Gazette: "We can see nothing at all to justify the belief that the Conservative party will not prove as strong when the day of trial comes as it has proved itself to be in the past." So says every intelligent observer. Men can always talk best about that which they understand the best; but those who understand a subject the best can not always talk the best about it. Neither Washington, Napoleon nor Grant could have made a stunner speech about war. Oliver Goldsmith is said to have written like an angel and to have talked like a parrot. According to the Dundas Banner, "Mr. Foster is a good speaker. He made an able speech the other day at Smith's Falls. Foster and Montague make a strong combination. Foster supplies the bread and Montague, spreads the jam on it." Food of this kind is wholesome, and it is satisfactory to know that the electors relish it and thrive upon it. The appearance of Bonaparte in the United States Senate will be an interesting episode of American politics. Among the Republican candidates for Senator Gibson's

THE MAGAZINES.

HARPER'S New Monthly Magazine gives us the first taste of Christmas. It comes decorated with a fancy cover, beautifully illustrated for the holiday season, and more than usually well filled with good literature for men and women of good taste. Among the most interesting of the articles is "Poverty Begot Liberty" of the German Struggle for Liberty from the power of France under the first Napoleon. "On Snowshoes to the Barren Grounds," by Caspar W. Whitney, is picturesquely descriptive of our own Northern and Western Canada. William Dean Howells and other first-class American writers contribute the fiction and lighter articles which make up this excellent old New Monthly Magazine.

McClure's Magazine also appears in holiday attire. It, too, is an exceptionally attractive number, the leading figure being Abraham Lincoln, a short but sage dealing only with the finances. The Montreal Gazette reminds us that when he was President before he acted in a like manner and devoted a message to the advocacy of free wool. Congress would not give the country free wool and, in the succeeding election, Mr. Cleveland was defeated. The rebuff was only temporary, for now he is President again, and free wool is an established feature of the tariff. His record on the wool issue will not detract, therefore, from the force of his message on the money question.

A Society has been formed in Great Britain called "The Seeley Society." The aim of the society is to bring home to all minds the importance of the British Empire, to tell the story of British enterprise in every part of the world, to teach those achievements of order and justice which have put a crown of glory on the British rule in India and elsewhere, to show that upon cooperation throughout the empire depends the continuance of that supremacy at sea, without which our commerce, the life blood of the whole, cannot be permanently secure; finally to impress upon the public conscience the greatness of the responsibility now confronting the British race in its imperial inheritance and to discuss the means whereby this joint responsibility can be best met. In this discussion the word "colon" should receive some attention. It seems to us that the word should be dropped, when applied to outlying parts of the Empire. The subjects of the British Crown born in these parts are as much British subjects as those born in the United Kingdom.

One of the boasts of the French is that the nation, departmental, municipal or other minor governments do not have to go outside of France when desirous of raising a loan, and that the same is true of the United Kingdom. The country is abundantly supplied with the circulating medium, the Bank of France is immensely wealthy, and money is extremely plentiful in the country. There is always plenty of cash in France, and the municipal and business concerns with reasonable reputations find no difficulty in securing money at low rates. This excellent state of financial affairs is ascribed largely to the habits of saving and thrift which so thoroughly permeate the French people, and which are inculcated in the children of the nation. It is said that in many schools, instead of books or other articles, money is given in prizes. $1, $2 or $3 is deposited in the bank at the credit of the successful child and the little one is given the bank-book, with the advice to add to the sum. The habit of saving is taught in the schools and the result is the growth of the thrifty habits which have produced so much money in the European republic. In this, says the Star, Canada, Ontario and Toronto might find an example worth being followed. Our children are not as saving in disposition as the necessities of modern developments require, and there is need of training such as the system which has succeeded in France.

ISLANDERS ON THE DEFENSIVE.

The Catholic Record, of London, Ontario, in its issue of a week or so ago, through Thomas O'Hagan, an Ontario poet and litterateur, claimed Nova Scotia as the native province of Archbishop O'Brien. Last week it publishes the two following letters from two well-known islanders: To the Editor of the Catholic Record: Sir,—Kindly allow me to say to Dr. Thomas O'Hagan, in reference to his letter in your last issue, that neither Archbishop O'Brien nor Charles G. D. Roberts are Nova Scotians. His Grace is a Prince Edward Islander, and Mr. Roberts a New Brunswicker. Yours faithfully, WILLIAM C. DESBRISAY. Ottawa, Nov. 17th, 1895.

The following few lines from our friend, Father Burke, of Prince Edward Island, corrects an impression innocently conveyed by Thomas O'Hagan, Esq., in his letter on "Canadian Poets and Poetry," published in our last issue: Sir,—Please inform Mr. O'Hagan, who has recently been writing up Canadian poets, and who very properly supplies a glaring omission of your own, that Archbishop O'Brien is by no means a Nova Scotian, and need not, therefore, be mentioned in this connection with Howe or Halliburton. He is a Prince Edward Islander, and owes all his inspiration to the beautiful island home of his earlier days. We are not generally disposed to dispute the honors of the older and larger provinces; but as our poet, unlike Homer, has never left his birthplace in his life, but ever expressed his pride in it, a manifest injustice would be done us (and may I add, him?) if Nova Scotia were permitted to claim him for her own. P. E. I. may be small geographically, but any other sense, please look up the records. Yours truly, A. E. BURKE.

While our sons are on the alert like this, there is little danger of us losing our honors. Let us only multiply them.

CARELESS BUSINESS MEN.

Many business men are imprudent enough to slip out of their offices on some short errand to see a man (not necessarily about a dog) without an extra coat. The result is often serious these cold winter days and they regret their carelessness, perhaps after a week's sickness. The danger of this habit would be greatly reduced if every man's inner coat and vest lined with Fibre Chamois. It is so light that with the coat unbuttoned its presence would not be noticed, but on going out button up the coat and not a breath of wind or raw damp air would go through. It makes an invulnerable protection against cold, and always keeps in the natural warmth.
