is thin blood. It causes pale faces, white lips, weak nerves and lack of vitality. A blood-enriching, fat producing food-medicine is needed.

Scott's Emulsion goes to the root of the trouble, strengthens and enriches the blood, and builds up the entire system.

For anemic girls, thin boys, and enfeebled mothers, it is the Standard remedy.

HUGH JOHN AT MONTREAL.

NOW THE DECEIVED YOUNG MEN FEEL—A PARTY OUGHT TO FULFIL ITS PLEDGE—WHAT IS THAT MAKES A LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE PROUD OF HIS PARTY.

Mr. Hugh John Macdonald at Montreal gave his reasons for believing that the Opposition would win in the coming elections and continued:—"But there is another advantage we have on this occasion, and it is a great one. We were placed in an awkward position during the last night by the fact that the Conservative party had been in power so long that practically speaking nearly a new generation had grown up and the majority of the electors had forgotten the time the reformers were in power before, those dismal days of deficits and soup kitchens, (hear, hear and cheers), they had then no record to which we could refer; but now they have been in power between four and five years and have built up a record—a mighty record. (Laughter and cheers.) They have broken nearly every pledge on which they came before the electors. It matters not what a man's political opinions are, they must admit they have not fulfilled the pledges they made when asking the people for their votes. That gives us an immense pull today and has turned interests that were against us to our side. They tell a story of an Icelandic citizen up in our part of the country. He believed that if the reformed party could get into power the duty would be taken off lumbering instruments and farming implements. Believing these pledges he voted and worked for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was out in the woods one day with his axe when turning round him he saw a bear near him and it was making for him. He dropped the axe and ran away as hard as he could. The bear followed him, running faster than he could; so, seeing a large trunk of a tree lying on the ground with a hollow in it he crawled in to escape the bear which was following him. He crawled up the hollow part as far as he could go and there he observed a little knot hole, all this time the bear was behind him and he felt its warm breath at his feet and gave himself up for lost; but when he had consigned himself as the victim of Bruin's fury—it is said that just before death a man's misdeeds pass before his mind—he thought of all the misdeeds he had done during his life and they flashed through his mind in a moment, and in the course of it he thought what a fool he had been in voting for Sir Wilfrid's policy, when every pledge which it caused him to vote that way had been broken; and then he said he felt so small that he crawled right

THROUGH THAT KNOT HOLE.

(Roars of laughter.) Now I believe there are many hundreds and thousands of men in this Canada of ours who feel quite as small as my Icelandic friend. (Renewed laughter.) We have a record now to refer to. We know what they pledged themselves to when the Government came before the great electorate of Canada asking for their support, and I think you will all agree with me, whether you are reformers or Conservatives, that it is the duty of a party when asking the electorate to support them to tell them plainly what they are going to do. (Cheers.) That is one thing that makes me proud to be a Conservative, because, rightly or wrongly, the Conservative party have always told the people when asking for their vote what their policy was. (Hear, hear and cheers.) Look at 1878, when they introduced their national policy; when the House met it was attacked by men of great ability like Alexander MacKenzie, Edward Blake, Richard Cartwright, and others. They all attacked it. They said it was unworkable; that it would ruin the country, that it would not produce the reform it was suggested it would; but not one of them said that in introducing their policy the Conservatives had not carried out the promises they had made to the people. Sir Alex. MacKenzie said in the House that they had not only redeemed their pledges, but had gone far beyond them to the remains sent over to England, so a game was flashed across the wires that the remains should be sent to the old country. The Young Americans answered: "There ain't no remains. He was kicked by a mule. (Laughter.) I think that will be the result of the vote of the electorate on the Reform party, if you gentlemen just judge of them by their conduct. There was loud and continuous cheering.

I can tell you now, speaking as a humble member of the party, that what we fought for in 1878 in the shape of the National Policy is what we are fighting for today (renewed cheers.) We believe in protecting our own interests (cheering); we believe in protecting our own workmen (renewed cheers); we think a man is entitled to a fair day's wages for a fair day's work. That was the Conservative policy in 1878, and it is the Conservative policy in 1900 (Renewed cheers.) And there is no false note struck by any prominent man on our side to day. Every man when addressing the electors states what the party will do if returned to power. You can judge of the future by the past, and if we return to power you may be sure you will know what the Conservative party are going to do. I would ask you to glance briefly over the platform laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues before the last election. It was a platform carefully prepared; and what was the cardinal note? That they were going to eliminate every trace of protection from their fiscal policy. Have they attempted to do away with protection? Have they not stolen our clothes? It is a mighty good thing for the country that they have done so because they are a great deal better off now than in the ragged tattered remnants they had on. But their clothes remind us very much of my own appearance if I were to be habited, for instance, in the garments of the chairman. They would be much too large and the trousers would bag at the knees. (Laughter.) The Conservative suit was made for large men, but it was very much better than they had on before and it was a very good thing for the country that they have made this theft. There is not a thing that entitles the Government to the confidence of the electors now, and I shall be surprised if the people of Canada do not when they mark their ballot show they believe in public morality, and that when a party comes before them pledged to a certain policy they will show that it shall be carried out. (Cheers.) I hope everyone present will weigh very carefully the position before marking his ballot; that he will look at the matter fairly from the standpoint of the best interests of the country; and if he does so I am not afraid of the results. I believe if that be done the position of the Liberal party the morning after the election may be described as that of the young English fellow who went out to a Western ranch. His partner in America telegraphed to the father of the young man announcing his death. The recipient of the message was much cut up to hear of his son's death and thought the best thing was to send the remains sent over to England, so a game was flashed across the wires that the remains should be sent to the old country. The Young Americans answered: "There ain't no remains. He was kicked by a mule. (Laughter.) I think that will be the result of the vote of the electorate on the Reform party, if you gentlemen just judge of them by their conduct. There was loud and continuous cheering.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY

Said Brown unto his wife one day, "We've nothing left to eat; If things go on in this queer way, We can't make both ends meet." His wife replied in words discreet, "Oh, we won't be badly fed; If you can make but one end meat, I'll make the other bread?" Chicago News.

BUT GOOD WIFE!

You can't make good Bread, if you don't use good Flour. It's a mistake many people make in buying Flour as well as other things, in thinking they are using economy by buying a cheap grade but it generally proves the dearest in the end. When in want of Flour give us a call; we keep most of the standard brands and can quote as low prices as anyone in the trade.

Save Your MONEY.

To save your money, by getting more for it, ask your dealer in medicine to show you the new 50 cent size bottle of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT. It contains over three times as much as the old 25 cent style, which is a great saving to those who use this valuable family medicine. The superior quality of this old Anodyne has never been equaled.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

Fifty years ago this month, Dr. Johnson left with me some Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. I remember him distinctly, and could tell you just how he was dressed on that day. I have used Johnson's Liniment ever since. Can't truly say it has maintained its high standard from that time to this. No medicine today possesses its confidence of the public to a greater extent. JOHN E. RAND, North Waterford, Me., Jan. 1892.

As a family remedy it has been used and endorsed for nearly a century. Every Mother should have it in the house for many common ailments, internal as much as External. Our book on INFLAMMATION free. Price 25c and 50c. J. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass.
