"ROB ROY'S" ROASTING.

SIR,—Is the house prorogued was asked a few days ago of a man who was loitering about the portals of the Provincial Building, as if waiting for somebody or something. "Oui Monsieur," he answered. It was afterwards pointed out that that individual was Pineau, the Conservative member from Tignish, as the Montreal Star gracefully puts it at the foot of the caricature of him,—"The little jule, with a little admiral, with a tremendous odor."

Well, never mind, we shall take it for granted that the Provincial Parliament or whatever you choose to call it, is prorogued after a short session of boisterous activity and turmoil, at the opening of which it was feared at one time that four ounce gloves would be too heavy for Premier Farquharson, as a breach of the Marquis of Queensbury rules was threatened. But such scenes belong to the Grit creed and are therefore not a novelty.

Looking back at the doings of this irresponsible administration we fail to find what they have done or accomplished since they have come into power, or rather into office, or even during the session just closed. Has the government made an honest and supreme effort to cut down or keep down the debt of the Island, which they have rolled up to a fabulous figure, viz., about three quarters of one million dollars or more? What have they to show for this vast debt with which the people of the province find themselves just now saddled? They have not a single thing to point out to the people with pride of having been done for even a quarter of this debt—absolutely nothing!

The pledges and promises made and renewed by Premier Farquharson at each and every bye-election remain unfulfilled and unhonored. Railways and bridges were to be built. Roads were to be made, and repaired with neatness and despatch, as well as scores of other improvements that would be of great benefit to the country. The turning of one sod will not build a railway. An old scow worth $10, and earning to somebody about $15 per day on the Hillsborough, will not build a bridge to Southport. As for roads, they were as good if not much better in the primeval days of the forest island when there were no road grants. Today in some places the roads would actually be quite suitable for an excellent exercising grounds for an international hurdle-race.

If Premier Farquharson and his incapable Government have done nothing for the country there is one thing in particular they can claim credit for. They have dragged our responsible form of Government down under foot into the mire of clay. They have violated every principle of it.

It is true that after the elevation of Hon. H. C. McDonald (Atty. Gen.) to the bench, D. A. McKinnon, Esq., received the appointment. He presented himself to his constituents in Murray Harbor for re-election, but the people rejected him by a large majority, and that against the might of both governments, and therefore he could not take his seat. Premier Farquharson, in his dilemma, left the vacancy open fearing another appeal to the country. Mr. A. Peters was then the only lawyer on the government side of the House, and he would no doubt have received the appointment of Attorney General but the people stood in the way. Besides, it is said that his legal attainments, his legal acumen and calibre generally are extremely limited, that he knows as much about international law as Tecumseh, the Tippecanoe Indian Chief knew of the United States Declaration of Independence—(he never heard of it).

Premier Farquharson essays to carry on the administration or mal-administration in defiance of the people. The country has distinctly pronounced against him and his government in the districts of Belfast, Murray Harbor, New London and Tignish, where his candidates were put to rout, horse, foot and artillery; in the Liberal district of West River, where one of the two Liberal candidates was elected. It may be said that if the case was examined it would be learned that Mr. Wise is one of the old time Liberals, and that he has not relinquished one tittle of his principles, and on election day Mr. Wise was, and is, as good a Liberal as Dr. Douglass is. Mr. Wise's only grievance was that he could not conscientiously support Premier Farquharson and therefore withdrew his support from his administration. With Mr. Farquharson out of the Government, Mr. Wise would loyally support the party as formerly. The election, therefore, which has taken place in West River—an out-and-out Liberal constituency—was fought out between two stalwart Liberals. The Conservatives took advantage of the conflict to expose the short-comings and incompetency of the Government, which, looking through Grit spectacles, might be taken as fighting the under dog.

Premier Farquharson may think that because of the result of this election his power is approved by the country,—but such is not the case. The Government is only in office by the grace of Pineau. Premier Farquharson is usurping power and authority that does not belong to him. Yes, it is through this "little animal with the tremendous odor" who, through and by bribery and corruption, quit the ranks of the Conservatives, by whom he was elected, to assist Premier Farquharson, who was like a tree shaken by the wind, to tide the Government over the session.

During their term of office Premier Farquharson and his Government have surrendered themselves to a carnival of political corruption. They have turned our legislative halls—halls made famous by Coles, Whelan, Pope, Brecken (living) Haviland, Gray, and a long line of other eminent statesmen—into a charnel house of political squallor. They have turned them into a cesspool of political prostitution and debauchery, they have made them an abyes of humiliating degradation and dishonor.

People high in office in former times, under the British Crown suffered punishment in divers ways and manners for dishonourable political deeds. Is Premier Farquharson less guilty than Sir Robert Walpole, at the time M. P. for Lynn, England, and Treasurer of the Navy. He was convicted by the English House of Commons for "breach of trust and notorious bribery" expelled the House and imprisoned in the Tower?

Is Premier Farquharson less guilty (to come down to our own time) than Oom Paul Kruger (whom people say he greatly resembles) who, when he found that the cause of truth, liberty and justice was to prevail at the point of the British bayonet and that he stood in danger of losing his government. What did he do in the emergency? He goes into the enemy's country and through offerings of bribes he sought to induce the neighboring tribes—Zulus etc., and to take up arms and assist to drive the British into the sea. They proved too loyal and spurned the offer. What did Prem. Farquharson do when he found that his forces were being decimated in every case that he submitted to the people at the polls and found that he was about to be deprived of office. He goes sniping into the ranks of Her Majesty's loyal opposition, and by political bribery and corruption and by the political connivance and substantial assistance of the Plumed Knight, "Sir Loo," of Ottawa, succeeds in bagging his weak-kneed game—hurries him off to Ottawa and after a short stay there—thence to a foreign country—(not France) to overcome his remorse of conscience if he has one. Return he did, to have the final say and yes in all and every measure brought up by the Government, whether right or wrong—oftener the latter.

It is said that Belfast through its senior member has the honor of being one of the custodians and caretaker of this "little animal with a tremendous odor," during the last session. Belfast certainly has cause to be proud, to see its senior member kept busy, otherwise he would never set the heather on fire, in endeavouring to make good some of the promises and pledges made at election times. There is no doubt but that when responsibility rested on his head for fear, that when serving the "little animal" with "emergency food" it was not rat-poison. Since the House rose it is also said that the price Eau-de-Cologne and other perfumes have advanced 50 per cent—such is the demand.

Let my trusted and well-beloved Henry J. (as Premier Farquharson lovingly calls him) seek much-needed rest in the back woods of Tignish and brood over the past as to how he faithfully and well served the people who elected him. Should not this be sufficient mental exercise for his massive intellect? Let him by way of a change to which he is well adapted by experience, take up the study of the nature, habit and peculiarities of the carnivorous animals of North America—and when this is well mastered establish a first class menagerie of rare animals, little and big. No doubt but the Montreal Star would render him every assistance from its well-stocked supply of information. Apologizing for the space, I will wrap myself up in my Feleadh beag and go to my cave. Rob Roy.

"More soldiers" is the demand which is coming to General McArthur from every department of the Philippine Island. Recent events have worked to vindicate General Lawton's judgment that 100,000 troops would be needed to establish American sovereignty over the Philippines. Until they attempted to hold provinces of two or three thousand hostile people with a regiment or two, the American commanders hardly realized the size of the Philippine Islands. Officers best acquainted with conditions in Mindano and the Sulu Islands tell the Associated Press' correspondent that they consider serious fighting there inevitable. The military authorities have ordered the formation of four troops of native cavalry, to be recruited from the Macabes and officered by Americans.

The Halifax Herald is informed that the General Mining Association, acting under the instructions of the Nova Scotia Steel Company, has notified dealers in New Brunswick to the effect that they will not fill any orders for coal for next season. This is taken to mean that some of the coal at present sent to local markets will be diverted to some other use—this use will no doubt be that of coke purposes. It is stated by good authority that the construction of the coke ovens will begin not later than August or September. The location of the ovens will be near Sydney Mines.
