PLEDGE CONSULTATIONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Civil Service Federation of Canada said Monday it will be consulted by treasury board officials before new regulations for prevailing rate employees are enforced. The new regulations now are being prepared. Federation President Claude A. Edwards said he had been told by treasury board Secretary C. G. E. Steele that the federation's request for consultation had been approved. Prevailing rate employees are non-salaried government workers hired at wage rates prevailing in their respective trades in the area in which they work.

Camouflage Is Seen Possible For North Atlantic Fleet Subs

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A high-ranking U.S. Navy authority says it would be possible to camouflage a North Atlantic fleet of Polaris-carrying merchant ships to reduce the fleet's vulnerability to enemy attack.

This officer, who asked not to be named, said the Polaris missiles could be tucked away in the holds out of sight, the vessels could be painted different colors so that there would be no uniformity for identity and the ships could fly flags of different NATO countries.

The merchant ships, which would cost less than one-half the price of atomic submarines and would take about one-half the time in buildinf, might be made ready in about two years if the NATO powers agree to participate, the officer said.

The Polaris merchant ships would be unescorted and their defence armament would be hidden so that the enemy, scouring the seas, would find it difficult to pick out the right ship for attack.

MOVE TO BAYS

The Polaris ships could move into shallow bays and fjords—places where atomic submarines could not operate.

With the range of the Polaris missile now being estended to 2,800 miles from about 1,800 it might be possible to station such surface ships off the Atlantic seaboard or perhaps eventually even in the Great Lakes.

The officer estimated that on a single day there may be as many as 4,000 ships on the Atlantic and about 1,500 on the Mediterranean — providing excellent naval shrubbery to hide the missile-carrying ships.

The plan would be to build the missile ships with sufficient speed so that they could outrun any existing trawler or submarine—"except our own." He believed this speed over the enemy could be maintained "for some years to come."

Judy Misses Cues In Song

LONDON (AP) — Judy Garland stopped one of Britain's top television shows Sunday night. Twice she missed her cue for song.

While a packed audience watched the show, Sunday Night at the London Palladium, Judy held up her hands.

"Come on now, let's get together," she told the orchestra. "We can stop and start again—even on live television."

The audience laughed with her. And off she went into the song.

For Judy it was an emotion-packed night. It was on this same stage that she made her great comeback 12 years ago after she was fired by her studio for being overweight.
