Harmfulness of Preservatives.

The use of preservatives for milk and its products is universally condemned, as it ought to be, by all who have given dairy problems and dairy methods any attention. The scientist too, coincide in the view that nothing that will preserve milk from fermentation can fail to be injurious to digestion, and physicians will tell us that wherever preservatives are used in milk, there deaths from bowel trouble among children will be numerous, to say nothing of the injury done to the digestion of adults. At a recent trial in Pittsburg, Pa., of dealers in meats charged with using preservatives, Prof. Ashmon, a skillful chemist, testified as an expert that all preservatives were dangerous, and even at their best were destructive to digestion. One of the strongest reasons for frowning upon the sale of "renovated butter" is the fact that preservatives are almost invariably employed in its manufacture. It should be borne in mind always that any drug having the power to arrest fermentation in milk is able, to just the same extent, to arrest the digestive process which goes on, or ought to go on, in the stomach. There ought to be a strong sentiment in the subject which would indict at the bar of public opinion any seller of milk who uses preservatives. It ought to be clearly understood that men who, for gain, will day by day, slowly poison and undermine the health of the public, taking the risk also of probably destroying the lives of many young children, are worthy of the name of men. Reputable people ought to recoil from it as they would from any other suggestion looking to the slow poisoning of their fellowmen for the sake of self.—Ranch and Range.

The Value of Ensilage.

Sometime ago a royal commission was instituted in England to investigate the merits claimed for the ensilage system of preserving green fodder. The following extract from the report should convince every one that the silo is one of the most valuable adjuncts a stock raiser can have:

"We have received the strongest evidence of the unbounded advantage of the system for the feeding of dairy stock. The effect of dry winter food given to such stock has always been to reduce in quantity, and to deteriorate in quality, milk, cream and butter, as compared with the same products resulting from green summer food. Although the degree of perfection attainable in summer has not been reached, it has been at least much more nearly approached by ensilage than by the use of hay and other dry foods, while at the same time, the objections inseparable from the employment of roots for this purpose have been overcome. A sensible improvement in the color of butter has been especially noticed. Green fodder preserved by ensilage has been successfully employed in feeding sheep and cattle at the time of breeding and as it has been shown to increase the flow of milk, it will undoubtedly be found useful for this purpose, although the proportion of its admixture with other kinds of food must always require care and judgment. It forms a complete and wholesome food for store stock, and in fattening, and its value is widely demonstrated in the case of dairy produce; it enables farmers to use profitably straw chaff, rough hay, and other hay materials."

Steam Engines on the Farm.

Whenever a steam engine is brought to the farm, it only for a few hours' use in threshing or some other farm work, it is at once made the mark for much inquiry, and for many curious eyes among the boys on the place. This curiosity ought to be encouraged instead of being repressed, as too often is. Most of the work of the world is now done by steam, and as this tendency to substitute steam for human labor increases, the knowledge of the construction of a steam engine and how to operate it becomes one of the most important branches of practical education that a young man can acquire.

Salt for Animals.

Salt makes animals more lively, strong and capable of resisting disease. Their flesh is harder, and the functions of the organ are more regular. Their digestion is better and they can subsist on fodder that otherwise might be injurious to health. Moreover with the assistance of salt they can extract more nourishment from a given quantity of fodder, since the flow of the digestive liquids is more copious. Hence, salt is of special importance.

Hot Water for Insects.

The old-time remedy of hot water for insects is coming to the front again. Water heated to about 125 degrees will kill most any insects. A vessel is filled with water and plants in pots are up-turned and dipped into it. A slight skim of kerosene on the water is an additional advantage.

Paint Sawed off Limb.

When large limbs are sawed from orchard trees do not fail to paint the scar. Limbs broken in storms should be sawed off to make a clean surface, and then be painted. Many a valuable tree which has rotted down started decaying from exposed wounds.—Practical Farmer.

we have been studying paint—its best composition and its best application. We have only one aim. That is to make the best paint possible. The markets of the world are open to us. If all white lead or all zinc made the best paint it would be wise for us to make it so. But experience shows that a combination of these two substances makes far better paint than either one alone. Therefore, as we are neither white lead dealers, nor zinc dealers, we use enough of each to produce the best result, and with pure oil and the best drier, we make the paints that have made us.
