

ELLEN'S DIARY

Middle Age Approaches When Curiosity Declines

"I know by heart all the alphabets... Alex informed this evening... I learned it today, yesterday, I could get past the 'G'. But now - weel, would you like to hear me say it for you right down to Z?"

So far, he enjoys his classes, looking forward happily to his lessons... He finds a happiness in reading books.

It is, we have found, a mixture, comprised of bits and pieces of things. For us, it is meadow - flowers and roses, a tangle of wood, and a bramble affame... It is a requirement of work to do, an obligation to family and folks, and time over, just "to stand and stare."

"Curiosity is certainly one of the chief guarantees of life's enjoyment" someone, no longer young, has reminded us. And the older one grows the more vitally necessary it is to preserve curiosity. Middle age begins with its decline, and the first failure of curiosity you notice in others must be jumped upon ruthlessly!

"If you observe a really happy person" another says "you will find him building a boat, writing a symphony, educating a child, growing a garden, or looking for dinosaurs eyes in the Gobi desert. He will not be searching for happiness as if it were a collar-button that has rolled under the rug, but as if he were a butterfly, for it is as good to itself. He has become aware that he is himself the cause of his own happiness."

It is Dr. Albert Schweitzer, until tomorrow - Diary - requisite for happiness.

"One thing I know" he declares, "the only ones among you who will be really happy, are those who will work, and who find how to serve."

"How beautiful the countryside is now" a caller of this afternoon offered. "We came by a valley where on either side, the leafy trees ranged up in both many shades to the lovely blue of the sky. It was so lovely, breathtaking exactly, we left the car and stood a while just feasting eyes on the sight!"

"And we visited too," a narrow, winding byroad we like my companion related. "It is one where for a distance the maples and birches over-arch in a pretty green canopy during the summer. And now in this autumn dress, it is truly an enchanted trail."

"We hope we don't get a high wind to take away the longings too soon" we said. "It is one where for a distance the maples and birches over-arch in a pretty green canopy during the summer. And now in this autumn dress, it is truly an enchanted trail."

"The moon is hanging her wash in the sky; You are not the whiteness as you pass by. The moon's clotheless is like Milky Way, And the wash is the stars themselves, folk say!"

Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night...

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE S. TROWSDALE Summerside Church Is Scene Of Wedding And Reception

The Summerside Presbyterian Church was the setting for the marriage of Janice Fay Trowdale and Wayne Sydney Trowdale. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Millar, Ellerslie, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Trowdale, Borden. Rev. J. Donald MacKay officiated at the ceremony and was assisted by Rev. Peter J. Darch.

Vises of flowers decorated the church and guest seats were marked with fern and white satin bows.

Mrs. James Hubley, Summerside, was organist and soloist were Mrs. Etan Ramsay, Summerside who sang "O Perfect Love" and Mrs. Ian Vincent, Summerside who sang "Wedding Prayer".

Given in marriage by his father, the bride chose a floor-length satin gown with train. The bodice was fashioned with a scooped neckline and full length tapered sleeves. Her bouffant veil of nylon tulle was held by a satin pillow headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Frank Lewis was matron-of-honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids were Shirley Reeves and Diane Thompson. Charles Lewis was flower girl, and Elaine Lewis was ring bearer.

Matron-of-honor and bridesmaids were identically attired in street length dresses of pale green satin gown. Their hand pieces were in a matching shade of nylon net attached to organza rosebuds. They wore white gloves and white satin shoes.

The matron-of-honor carried a crescent bouquet of mums and carnations tinted green. Bridesmaids carried nosegays of the same flowers with a white floor length white satin gown with a sash of pale green peacock silk and carried a basket of mums tinted green.

Blair MacDonald, Summerside, was best man. Ushers were Ronald MacArthur, North Am., and Kevin Ransay, Borden.

The bride's mother wore a two-piece sheath dress of beige or cream.

Long Service Pins Are Given At Stanhope's 35th Anniv.

Mrs. Helen Herring was the guest of the Stanhope Women's Institute when they celebrated their 35th Anniversary Saturday evening with a banquet in the Community Hall.

Mrs. Herring reviewed the work of Women's Institutes in the fields of agriculture, education, health and culture, and brought news of the newly organized sister Institutes in New Canada, making mention that each branch comprises a cross-section of Indian, Meis, Wabigoon and some Eskimo.

She urged that all Institutes strive to create interest in their organizing by well designed programs of business, education, and social hour, each in its proper perspective. She made mention that "behind every good Institute, there are good husbands and the Institutes were to keep up with the times, they would have to take a look in the mirror and make a plan to let out their seams."

Other guests for the evening included charter members, and senior citizens who were met at the door by the president, Mrs. Alvin MacLauchlan, and a corsage or anniversary pinned on each.

A three-tiered antique cake decorated in blue and yellow tinted the head table, and on either side were tall blue and yellow taper in candleabra, while beautiful fall flowers and coloured leaves enhanced the other tables and surroundings.

Before grace was said by Raymond Carr, a neo-ministry of departed members and senior citizens. A turkey supper was served, after which Mrs. Helen Herring extended a cordial welcome on behalf of the Institute.

Toasts were proposed to the Queen, charter members, senior citizens, Institute, husbands and the young ladies of the district, who so capably waited on the tables.

Mrs. Ray Carr and Mrs. James MacLauchlan, two still active charter members, made the inaugural cut in the anniversary cake. These two women, as well as Mrs. George MacMillan, were present with P.E.I. W.I. units as a tribute to their long service.

The teen-agers favoured the gathering with a selection of singing and poetry, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Warren Marshall.

Such enjoyment was derived from the evening that Mrs. Keith Douglas, who presided, had to extend a vote of thanks to all concerned in making the evening so successful, and to the piano, Herbert Baxter, all joined in singing songs old and new to bring a memorable evening to a close.

IDA BAILEY ALLEN Don't Let Detergent Spoil Coffee's Flavor

Late one afternoon I stopped at a cafeteria for a cup of coffee. The attendants at the various counter sections were unconsciously cleaning their mugs and stainless steel, filling 'salts and sugar', sugar shakers, mustard and ketchup dispensers and putting shades in order - in general, reducing the cafeteria to a state of six weeks. After the last thing they did was to clean the covered coffee pot. The coffee was brewed in a big urn that got extraneous attention.

At Jack scrubbing, washing, and rinsing I've never seen! This you probably made a therapeutic mistake (and in any case fell short of perfect charity of heart) when you closed off any exchange of last time and came back ostensibly to "rage" at it.

Seen in that light, the ache in your heart may be a valid ache, a signal from your conscience that you are not doing it right. The moral maturity, inflexible patience and inspired empathy required of you is a lesson in how to live to a lifeline to schizophrenics in their own private struggles.

MARY HAWORTH Desperate Parents Seek Help For Adopted Girl

Dear Mary Haworth: I was interested in your article about the adopted boy, 17, who is delinquent. I couldn't do anything since falling under the spell of a spoiled teenage girl.

My variations, the severity of your difficulties describes our own problems with our own daughter, and the friends she has chosen.

We've already been over the help-panic path with her, with very disappointing results. You advise the parents to "get the best advantage" of the Family Service and Legal Aid Bureau can provide, in dealing strongly with the whole problem of the boy's instability, day after day.

When we talked to our pastor, he could give only sympathy. But we wanted help. When we consulted a lawyer, he replied, "I can't do anything for you. That's what we do."

When we turned to Family Service counselling, our daughter was checked by psychiatric specialist, with diagnosis ranging from "schizoid personality" to "schizophrenic" in need of immediate psychiatric care. We were told not to set our commitment but to promote we ekiv control visits.

This I did and she had four consultations, then was told that she had time for the following week, but to return in two weeks. She never went back. I was told that she had a friend who could help her. I would like to continue to help her, but she said she would like to go to the States. I would like to help her, but she said she would like to go to the States.

I went through a hellish period, trying to coax her into going. I was told that she had a friend who could help her. I would like to continue to help her, but she said she would like to go to the States.
