Banks Have Plan For New Account

TORONTO (CP) — A new type of account, called a personal checking account, will be introduced by Canadian chartered banks June 2.

At present there are two types of account, the interest-bearing savings account, and the non-interest-bearing account for checking purposes which is used largely by commercial concerns.

Many people, however use their savings accounts as checking accounts — writing cheques against these accounts for payment of bills and other day-to-day transactions. For this service they are charged 15 cents a cheque.

The new account is aimed at these customers and the charge will be 10 cents a cheque, or five cents less.

There will, it is understood, be variations among banks in the operation of the new account. Some will apply pre-paid service charges through use of special cheques, while others will make service charges to the account at the end of the month. No matter how collected, however, the charge will be 10 cents a cheque or counter withdrawal.

Banking circles say the reduction in service charge will be made possible through simplification of banking routine and non-payment of interest on personal checking accounts.

It is expected that many people who now maintain only a savings account will use two accounts — one for savings which they do not expect to draw upon often, and the other for day-to-day checking purposes.
