SAD ACCIDENT.—We regret to hear of the sad accident which befel Mr. John Carraghar (formerly of DeSable, in this Province) at Haverhill, Mass., on the 18th ult. The Haverhill Bulletin thus describes the accident: The unfortunate young man was seen coming through Munro Street, and when he reached Market Street the railway crossing gates had been closed. He seemed in a hurry, and was on his way to Broad Street, where he worked. When he arrived at the gates the bystanders noticed his excited manner, but did not expect but what he would wait for the train to pass before attempting to cross the track. The express train was late and was running at fast speed to make up time, Lynn being the first place where a stop is made. The train was bearing down on the crossing when the man startled the conductors by crawling under the gates. They halted him and shouted loud for him to retrace his steps, but he did not heed the warning. He had reached the centre of the rails of the inward track, when he was struck by the cowcatcher of the engine and hurled violently into the air, striking against Russell's fish market building, and then the body dropped into a pile of stones. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the City Hospital, where he soon died.
