P. E. I. Department of Agriculture

Livestock breeders and agriculturalists are entering into one of the busy seasons. Plowing, harrowing, and seeding all represent long hours of hard work. The success of any of these farm operations depends to a large extent on planning and materials used.

Another Embargo
On top of the United States embargo on livestock from Canada there has come another stiff blow for a considerable number of livestock breeders.

Acetonemia
This condition is commonly seen in dairy cattle and is believed by some to be more prevalent than in former years. It is also observed in sheep and is known as Pregnancy Disease.

Garden Cultivation
Destroying weeds is only one of the reasons for cultivation, the big gain is improvement in the texture of the soil.

Rheumatic & Arthritic Pains
If you are suffering from arthritis, rheumatism, sciatica or neuritis, you may now hope to get fast relief from pain and discomfort.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

"I have six faithful serving men Who taught me all I know: Their names are Why and How and What

Most great achievements in exploration, and in nearly all scientific triumphs worth the name, have owed less to the desire for personal gain than to the natural curiosity which urges men to discover what lies beyond their immediate sight or understanding.

These six great little words are behind every good newspaper story. They have made the British Commonwealth, Captain Cook wanting to know what lay behind the stories of land in the unknown Pacific, found a new continent.

Many attempts to climb Mount Everest have ended in failure; but this year, or the next, the dream will become a reality, and the world may be handed some new and worthwhile data.

If it were not for the leaders with spirit and imagination who ventured out into the great unknown we should still be little more enlightened than our cave-dwelling ancestors.

Take away from man's use all the marvelous inventions since Benjamin Franklin and every nation of the earth would become primitive, poverty-stricken and sunk in deep despair.

retained by artificial selections. They are now kept as pets, or some fish, in almost every part of the civilized world.

Proclamation was made many years ago, at Tewkesbury, Eng. from a written paper, of which the following is a copy:

"Hobnail's wake - This his to give notice on Tuesday next, a hat to be played at back sard fare. Two bells to be tussled fore. A plum cake to be grempt in bags four. A pound of baker to be bold fore, and a showl to danc lot by wimen."

The following is condensed from a letter written to a London paper (1827) and bears the title "Ratting." "I propose that the number of rats be lessened by introducing them at table as a delicacy - Rat pie would be as good as rook pie; and four tails interposed, the serpents of a delicate tripod, and rising into a spiral obelisk would crest the crust more fantastically than pigeon's but - (2) Make use of their fur. Rat skin robes for the ladies would be beautiful, warm and inexpensive. (3) Inoculate a few of them with some infectious disease and turn them loose - if any patriotic society should think it proper to award a gold medal to the proposer, the projector has left his address with the editor."

Premier Discusses

The full amount had not been granted, the members would expect another increase when the present agreement with the Federal Government is terminated next year. They also were desirous that the age proviso be dropped from the pensions act, entitling a teacher of thirty years' service to a part pension regardless of age.

Miss O'Brien expressed the view that if the Federal Government had granted aid to education at the university level, there was no reason why aid should not be given to public education "which is our greatest bulwark against the forces which seek to destroy freedom from within."

In discussing the general field of education, Miss O'Brien reminded her audience that the most important single factor in the success of any educational system is the teacher, without whom the finest equipment and the best books are ineffective to kindle interest, encourage, lead and inspire. In conclusion she quoted Henry Van Dyke's line, that "No one is more worthy to be enrolled in a democratic aristocracy, king of himself and servant of mankind."

Welcome By Mayor

His Worship Mayor J. D. Stewart spoke briefly, welcoming the delegates to the capital and educational centre of the Province. He remarked that views on education nowadays seem to veer all the way from the idea that the three R's are sufficient to the notion that the teacher must be, in addition to other qualifications, an amateur psychiatrist as well, and declared that he thought there was probably some merit in new systems being tried elsewhere, notably the controversial OSU report card system by which the pupil is graded as outstanding, satisfactory or unsatisfactory in place of the old system of competitive marking by points.

Mayor Stewart assured his audience that the Council is acutely aware of the fact that the schools in the city are overcrowded and antiquated, and is giving thought to the erection of a high school. Regarding the raise recently granted to Island teachers, he said that while the $160 is undoubtedly welcome, he did not think twice as much would be commensurate with the amount deserved by the better members of a profession which is at the same time honourable and most difficult.

"Bottom of the Barrel"

Premier Jones launched his address on the salary question, in the form of a question, "Is the government the 'bottom of the barrel' and any further salary increase would have to come from the school districts. The amount contributed by the Government has risen from 62 per cent of the total in 1947 to 68 per cent today, more than in any other province in the country. He explained to the teachers that since the date on which the legislation was to come into effect, which would have been July 1, had been inadvertently omitted from the recently approved act to raise teachers' salaries, it had therefore gone into effect immediately, and the salaries for the remaining months would be calculated roughly upon this basis.

The Premier said that, although it was probably too late to remedy the situation, there are too many universities in the Maritimes, that one with a broad curriculum would be preferable to the several with a narrow course of study now in existence. In somewhat the same vein he mentioned the very high standard attained by P. W. C., and went on to speak of a letter, only one of many which he had received, asking for the establishment of a rural high school. He said "we cannot take Grades XI and XII out into the villages," and that in fact he doubted whether these grades can be taught satisfactorily in any more than one place, as good educational institutions of the calibre of P. W. C. are very expensive to maintain.

With regard to needy students, he said that the prospect for them was now a bright one, as they will be given every consideration when the new scholarships are awarded. He also told his listeners that the legislature had approved scholarships for first year teachers' training at P. W. C., but that after the act had been passed, it was discovered that there was no teacher training in first year at Prince of Wales, and furthermore, that a number of prominent educationists in the provincial field had strongly advised against it. Therefore, the money could not be spent.

Education Commission

The Premier stated his intention of appointing a commission if suitable members could be found for it to examine the numerous problems facing educationists and to draw up a report which would be the basis for bringing about reforms in the system. He would have such a commission look into the administration of P. W. C., as possibly the time has come when a board of governors is the answer to its administrative needs, make recommendations as to the grading system in the province, in which there is already a divergence between P. W. C. and the Summerside school, and deal with many other questions, of which teacher training and licensing is only one.

He complimented Dr. L. W. Shaw on the tremendous improvements made in rural schools in the past few years, and spoke of the achievements of the Women's Institutes, who are now contributing large amounts to school improvement.

The segregation of students in teacher training classes at P. W. C. the Premier said he thought was a pity, as there was a tendency on the part of some of the students to look down upon those in these classes, and that the teachers were getting an inferiority complex, which was undesired and undesirable. They should take classes with the rest, and they should be allowed to drop out and teach for a year or more and gradually work up the scale until they qualified for a first class licence. Teachers should be looked up to, and they should dedicate themselves to the building up of the province, the Premier said. He recommended to them that they should follow the examples of the fine farm people of the Island, particularly that the women in the teaching profession should try to imitate the qualities of the farmer's wives of P. E. I. who in his opinion are the finest in the world.
