Some Industries May Get Aid If Harmed By Labor Code

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister MacEachen told the Commons here that some industries will be allowed a special deferment if they can prove hardship will result from enforcement of the hours of work set out in the new federal labor code.

He spoke as the House resumed clause-by-clause study of the labor code which provides for an eight-hour day and 40-hour week in industries under federal jurisdiction.

It also sets a $1.25 hourly minimum wage and minimum paid vacations and holidays.

Mr. MacEachen said a number of industries, particularly in the transportation field, are apprehensive about adverse effects of the hours-of-work provisions.

Some of the complaints could be met by extending the 18-month adjustment period set out in the bill. But, for others, an extension of the time will not provide a solution.

In these extreme cases an inquiry will be held to investigate all the facts of the situation and hear the view of employers and workers. The inquiry may recommend a deferment period.

Several opposition members complained about local feed mills being subject to the code regulations. William H. A. Thomas (PC—Middlesex West) said that unlike the major grain handling facilities, the local mills did not come under the Canada Grain Act and should not be subject to the code.

Douglas A. Enbrack (PC—Prince Edward Lennox) said he didn't see any excuse for the long finger of federal authority to suddenly asp and strangle the frugal economy of the local feed mill.

Donald MacInnis (PC—Cape Breton South) said the clause that restricts employees to an eight-hour day and a 40-hour week is "very restrictive." He said there should be nothing to prevent an ambitious person from working longer than that.

Thomas H. Bell (PC—Saint John Albert) referred to the case of East Coast longshoremen who have seasonal employment and during their peak periods some work 70 hours a week.

The Home and School Association held its monthly meeting in Alberton Regional High School on Tuesday evening with Mrs. Herman Corcoran presiding. Due to some cases of flu some of the members were unable to attend.

Mary Corcoran was a patient in the Western Hospital.

The weekly card play was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Gallant with seven tables in play.

Hermia Corcoran and Winston Corcoran, teachers at Tignish spent the weekend at their homes in Piusville.

STUDENTS DEMONSTRATE NAIROBI (Reuters)—Students waving banners and shouting "Yankees go home" demonstrated for about an hour outside the American embassy in this Kenya capital Monday. They said they were protesting against the bombing of Uganda border villages by Congolese-owned American planes and against "American aggression elsewhere."

SPEECH QUOTES AMUSE HOUSE

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons rocked with laughter when an opposition MP read some choice excerpts from a speech about udders made in Toronto earlier in the day by Agriculture Minister Hays.

Leon Balcer (PC—Trois-Rivieres) rose during the oral question period and quoted these lines from a speech in which Mr. Hays discussed a new prize class for dairy fairs— "best udder!"

"I've been told it's a simplification of a very complicated situation to say an udder is an udder and that it doesn't matter to what kind of cow it is attached.

"With all due respect to women and dairy cows, I think the same argument applies with about as much validity to some of our beauty contestants. I realize that a lot more could be said on the subject, but isn't an ankle an ankle, a bosom a bosom, whether the girl is Canadian or Swedish or from Australia?"

"After all, a woman's equipment just like a cow's is intended to do a certain job and the most important part of a dairy cow's equipment is the udder, regardless of her breed."

When the laughter died down, Mr. Balcer asked Mr. Hays, who was in the House, to elaborate on those interesting observations.

"Every farmer in Canada will understand those words," the minister replied, touching off another roar.

WHAP TV

HE FORGOT TO MENTION SPORTS—

1. Five of hearts. This lead offers the best chance of success. It is quite likely that declarer will win the first trick, but the hope is that partner will obtain the lead shortly and return a heart, in which case it may be possible to run four heart tricks and defeat the contract.

It would be wrong to lead the king first, since there is a definite possibility that partner has only two hearts and that we would be left without an entry to cash the low hearts after they became established as tricks. The fourth best card of a suit is the conventional lead against notrump.

2. Jack of spades. Prospects of beating the contract are poor, but whatever chance there is probably depends on developing partner's hand instead of our own. The J-10 combination, in conjunction with partner's hand, will establish defensive tricks much more readily in the long run than a club lead might. Against notrump contracts especially, you try to develop the combined partnership assets instead of trying to develop your own hand.

3. Four of hearts. There is no way of knowing whether a spade or a heart lead will work out best, but the odds heavily favor the heart lead.

The reason is that you need less from partner in hearts to develop the suit quickly than you need in spades. If partner has the queen or ace of hearts, you are well on the way to beating the contract with a heart lead, but if you were to lead a spade, partner would probably need two spade honors for the lead to work out well.

4. Three of spades. It is clear that a spade lead offers the best chance, and the only problem is which spade to lead. Most textbooks advise the lead of the jack with this combination, but, in the long haul, the fourth best spade will prove to be more effective.

5. Queen of spades. Obviously, the clubs are stronger than the spades, but nevertheless, the spade lead is slightly better.

Experience shows that if the opponents have length in spades between them, one partner or the other will investigate a possible spade game before undertaking a notrump game. The opponents' silence about spades indicates that they do not have many of them. The same deduction cannot be made with reference to clubs. The opponents will often ignore a club fit if they may have because they are generally reluctant to undertake an eleven-trick minor suit game
