The British fleet in the Pacific is to be reinforced and none so soon, for it is far too weak to protect the important interest there confided to it. Russia has a couple of ironclads in the Pacific while England has no more, and one of these is on the eastern shore of the Pacific and, therefore, not readily available for any warlike operations against Russia.

Meeting a newsboy whose face was scarred with scratches, and looked like a map of some great railroad centre, a newspaper reporter asked the youngster what the matter was. 'Feller spoke disrespectful of my sister; said he'd bat she was cross-eyed, and I sailed in.' 'Is your sister cross-eyed?' asked the reporter. 'Hain't got no sister,' was the reply. 'It was the principle of the thing that I got licked for.'

A gentleman sent his Irish servant up to his room for a pair of boots, and at the same time told him to be sure and get mates, as there were two pairs in the closet. Patrick returned with two boots, but odd ones. 'Why don't you see that these boots are not alike—one is a long top and the other a short one?' said the gentleman, out of patience with the fellow. 'Bedad, your honor,' said Pat in apology, 'and it's true for ye; but thin the other pair was just so, too!'

The King Cetewayo received a lesson in the social duties of Civilization while going to Cape Town on the Natal—he was photographed! We will do His Majesty the justice to say that he submitted to the operation at first with extreme reluctance. Stratagem was necessary to get him on deck, and he appears to have regarded the camera with much apprehension as something which might go off and hurt him. When he found that the portraying process caused no pain, he kept still enough to furnish a negative; but when the insatiate photographer begged him for another, the King sternly refused. One, however, will be sufficient to furnish all the picture shops of the Strand with six-penny copies, and the ex-king will soon figure there, and by his supreme ugliness prove a valuable set-off to the charms of Mrs. Langtry and other British ladies.

Boschees German Syrup

can now be purchased right at home, it is the most successful preparations ever introduced to our people. It works like a charm in all cases of Consumption, Pneumonia, Hemorrhages, Asthma, severe Coughs, Croup and all other Throat and Lung Diseases. No person has ever used this medicine without getting immediate relief, yet there are a great many poor, suffering, skeptical persons going about our streets with a suspicious cough, and the voice of consumption coming from their lungs, that will not try it. If you die, it is your own fault, as you can go to your druggist and get a sample bottle and try it; three doses will relieve any case. Regular size only 75 cts.

The Cabul Massacre.

(London Times.)

We have received from a private source the following account of the massacre, as taken down from the lips of one of the survivors:—

I have just had a long conversation with one of Sir Louis Cavagnari's servants, who escaped; he and three others are, as far as known, the sole survivors of the hideous massacre, of which doubtless you have been already informed by wire. The particulars of the occurrence are as follows: At about 7.30 a. m., on the 2nd, crowds of Afghan soldiery were perceived rushing towards the Residency. Sir Louis Cavagnari must have expected something, as he ordered all the Sowers inside, and had the gates closed. Soon a mob of four thousand men had collected. The gate was broken down, and in a few seconds the Sowers, though they fought nobly, were borne down by numbers and massacred to a man. A few soldiers, with the four white men, met the assault of the infuriated throng, who wild with fanaticism and the exultation of feeling their prey in their grasp, swarmed to the attack. No flinching, no wild firing was to be seen in the gallant little band that met and repelled the attack. Again and again did the Afghans, like a recurring wave, forced on by the pressure of those behind, vainly essay to win their way into the house. Each effort but increased the heap of slain that fast accumulated around the house. Cowed by their reception, they withdrew to the cover available from walls and houses, and from their vantage ground poured a hail of lead into every opening in the building. Gallant Hamilton, so lately adorned with the Victoria Cross, adorned it by his heroic bravery. He exposed himself undauntedly to the hottest fire, for a time he seemed to bear a charmed life, but at length a bullet pierced his heart, and he, fighting nobly, fell. Dr. Kelly ran to his aid, and a bullet speedily laid him low too. Jenkyns was the next to fall. Cavagnari, still unhurt, cheered on the gradually lessening band; his presence inspired all. Cheerfully and resolutely they dealt out death to many a treacherous Afghan. Cavagnari would strike while he could; he ordered the treasure chest to be emptied into the courtyard; the fire momentarily ceased. The Afghans, yielding to their greed, and thinking resistance over, crowded to seize the glittering rupees. In a moment our men concentrated their fire on the crowd struggling for the plunder. A fire more infernal than before was soon re-opened by the attackers, and now, to their other misfortunes, the magazine of the defenders exploded, and the roof was on fire. With numbers reduced by half, fire within, bullets from without, nothing daunted, each man stood to his post; but the reduced numbers told—a sudden rush of the enemy gained the door, that feeble barrier gave way; yet no sign of fear was shown—all met their death fighting. A surging throng filled the room where Cavagnari, a jemadar, and three natives were. Cavagnari's revolver spoke three times, the death-knell of as many Afghans, and then a blow from a heavy Afghan knife laid him low. His murderer did not long survive; with one blow of his sabre the jemadar swept off his head. A few more such blows he made, and then he lay beside his master. But one escaped, the narrator of the tale to me; he hid in a bath. The roof was now blazing, a part had fallen on the dead body of Cavagnari, so the crowd did not wait to search, but dragging the bodies of the killed from the burning house, they did not search for any concealed persons, and so my informant escaped. He was a man who was thoroughly conversant with the Afghan tongue, and, being a Mussulman, he managed after his escape from the house, to pass himself off as a Cabuli. The bodies were treated with all unmentionable indignities which Asiatics inflict on their enemies. From eight a. m., till two p. m., the attack on the Residency continued. Yakooob had plenty of other troops besides those that attacked the Residency, yet he made no attempt even to send them to the rescue. Daoud Shah, the Commander-in-Chief, found a sufficient reason in the pelting of a couple of stones at him not to interfere. Yakooob's son a mere boy, visited the scene of attack, but being politely told not to interfere, could not conquer his feelings of sympathy with the slayers of the Kafirs; he, too, did nothing. One noble old man there was, a Mollan (a mussulman priest), who sought Yakooob during the attack and begged him to interfere, and reproached him with the disgrace of killing a friend and an ambassador; but Yakooob said: "I can do nothing." It is stated that all was Yakooob's designs, and the seeming mutiny of troops was but a skillful cloak for the murderous act of his own origination. It is strange that at the massacre of McNaghten of the former mission, a Mollan had similarly reproached the Ameer, and that his words were the means of saving the lives of George Lawrence and others of the mission who had been seized, and were momentarily expecting their death. No such good fortune was in store for our unfortunate countrymen.

CATARRE.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.—DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head. A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister. Port Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.
