Couple Injured In City Accident

Two persons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles MacWilliams of Wood Islands, were taken to the Prince Edward Island Hospital as the result of being struck by an automobile early last evening.

The accident occurred at about 7 p.m. at the intersection of Euston and Prince Streets, where the two people, both about 70 years of age, were crossing from north to south on Euston.

The car which struck them, a small English model, driven by Charles MacDonald, Mr. Stewart, was proceeding east on Euston.

At the hospital they were placed under the care of Dr. P. Stewart, who at a late hour last night reported that Mrs. MacWilliams was suffering from numerous cuts, bruises and abrasions. Further examination will be carried out this morning to determine if any other injuries are present.

Mr. MacWilliams was treated for minor injuries to his right leg and was then released to his home. The elderly couple only recently took up temporary winter residence on Upper Prince Street.

Snap Election Said Caled To Beat Financial 'Mess'

(Editor's note: This is a story as written for The Guardian by a Canadian Press staff writer, who is providing special coverage of the political scene here for the Dec. 10 provincial election.)

By DAL WARRINGTON
Liberal Leader Alex Matheson accused Premier Walter Shaw Wednesday of calling a hasty election before the public finds out about "the mess" in Prince Edward Island's treasury.

"The finances of this province are an unbelievable mess," he said in an interview. "It's fantastic." He said Mr. Shaw's three-year-old Conservative government is spending millions and planning to spend millions more regardless of the province's ability to pay.

The 59-year-old former premier said the government will have to find $2,000,000 to cover the proposed abolition of hospital insurance premiums. It was also talking about $2,500,000 for resources developments, $1,000,000 for a new frozen foods plant and $5,000,000 for a new provincial office building.

Where is the money coming from, he asked, if not from the tax payers?

The full story would not be known until after public accounts are presented to the legislature. A Conservative government would never be re-elected after that.

The premier appeared to the woman of the province to take a more active part in politics. He noted that no woman has ever run for election to the Island legislature, although P.E.I. has a woman's jobs for ladies a woman member of Parliament.

He hoped soon to see some women members in the 30-seat assembly. No women candidates were nominated for the forthcoming Dec. 10 election. House standing at dissolution was Conservatives 22, Liberals six, with two former Liberal seats vacant.

U.S., Russia Give Cautious Welcome

GENEVA (Reuters)—The United States and Russia Wednesday gave a cautious welcome to a Swedish proposal to halt all nuclear tests by January and immediately begin dismantling of machinery to control the test ban.

Arthur Dean, chief U.S. disarmament negotiator, promised to study the proposal made by neutral Sweden in the 11-nation disarmament conference. But he said the suggestion sounded like an uncontrolled moratorium on testing and the U.S. could not agree to that in view of "our most unfortunate experiences with them in the past."

Russia gave an uncontrolled moratorium by legitimizing test in 1961.

Soviet delegate Semyon Tsarapkin told reporters he considered Sweden's proposal "worth studying in." But he charged the West with ignoring the recent United Nations resolution calling for a halt to testing by Jan. 1.

He also insisted that the West waive its demands for on-site inspection in controlling nuclear tests. If it considered this necessary to check suspicious events which might be underground tests.

Dean told the three-nation test-ban subcommittee of the conference that Sweden has done to "the limits of human ingenuity" to pressure Russia to accept nuclear test inspection would not mean spying.

He said Soviet charges that inspection teams could be Western espionage agents were "an patently ridiculous as to deny understanding."

British delegate Joseph Godwin, on each and every occasion that the scientists declare on-site inspection to be necessary, the Russians to commit himself.

Travel Bureau Move Revealed At Ottawa

BY ALAN DONNELLY
OTTAWA (CP)—The government's two big promotion efforts abroad and tourism are to be combined under the trade department, with the transfer of the Canadian government travel bureau from the northern affairs department.

Plans for the move, made public Wednesday, will put the force of trade officers behind the effort to attract foreign travelers and their money in Canada.

The travel bureau, with a $3,285,000 spending budget this year, has for years been administered by the northern affairs department. Its transfer to the trade department underlines the fact that the country's tourist earnings—and spending by Canadian tourists abroad—have an impact on Canada's balance of payments problem just as does commodity trade.

Northern Affairs Minister Diefenbaker said Wednesday that the switch of the 125-man travel bureau had been suggested by the Government royal commission on government operations during its study of the department.

OTHER FACTORS
But it was believed that one of the factors behind the decision was the travel bureau's plan to open a couple of tourist offices in Europe. It was felt that the job could be handled more efficiently by the trade department's sales force of trade commissioners there.

The travel bureau has offices in New York, Chicago and San Francisco and early last summer opened its first overseas office in London. About 60 per cent of its budget is spent for advertising in the United States.

The trade department has 65 trade commissioner offices in 25 countries and a substantial trade interest. It also has a Canadian tourist earnings have fallen short of what Canadian travelers spend in other countries. The trade deficit which is added to the country's international payments deficit in such things as foreign investment earnings and shipping costs.
