

FIVE members of the new executive of the Cornwall Women's Institute, who were

ary; Mrs. Gordon Worth, vice-president; Mrs. Harold Donahue, president; Mrs. s.

Jack MacLean, past president; and Mrs. Jack Donahue, treasurer.

Cornwall Women's Institute Holds Its Annual Meeting

Mrs. Wayne McEachern was hostess to the Cornwall Women's Institute for their November meeting, at which roll call was accompanied by the payment of annual dues. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Jack McDonald read the minutes of the previous meeting, and Mrs. Jack MacLean reported on the past year's work.

Mrs. Harold Donahue reported that Arthur Howard has consented to assist the institute in purchasing a flasher light for the intersection at Cornwall. Money has been advanced from the provincial government for this purpose.

Mrs. Hurstin Herlihy was appointed to present a gift to the raising secretary Mrs. Ralph McDonald, for her work as secretary in the past year, and for her faithful service in any other duties she has been called upon to perform for the institute. Mrs. McDonald has recently resigned.

The visiting committee reported that 35 cards had been sent during the month. It was decided to send treats to shut-ins at Christmas time.

Mrs. Herbert Scott, who was in-charge of entertainment for the meeting, then conducted a quiz program.

It was decided that the December meeting, which is to be held at the home of Mrs. Hurstin Herlihy, will be in the form of a Christmas party. Husbands of the members and other members of the community are to be invited. Christmas gifts will be exchanged and secret pal gifts will be exchanged among the members. Mrs. Carl Scott and Mrs. Harold Scott are to be in charge of the program, and all members are asked to bring food.

The slate of officers for the coming year is as follows: president, Mrs. Harold Donahue; vice president, Mrs. Gordon Worth; secretary, Mrs. James MacLeod; treasurer, Mrs. John Donahue; directors, Mrs. Hazen Howard and Mrs. Heber MacPhail; visiting committee, Mrs. Lincoln MacLeod, Mrs. Carl Scott, school committee, Mrs. Hurstin Herlihy, Mrs. Roland Gass; program, Mrs. Arthur Howard, Mrs. Ford Wilson, Mrs. Allison McPhail, Mrs. Elmer Zell, Mrs. Earl Lowther; auditors, Mrs. Colin McPhail and Mrs. Wayne McEachern.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Farm Children Receive An Ideal Start In Life

"It's frosty tonight. There'll soon be skating on the ponds" Mack said half-seriously, this evening, coming by when the glass was falling.

"I'll be skating" Gordie, Jamie's eldest, smiled.

"I'm going to skate" Wendy hearing nodded, looking up from her play.

"I'm going to skate" Cathy echoed.

If the season was putting the fields to sleep, if every delight of the summer days was now past, the farm-children would, in good time, find compensations for such losses. Sledding and skating, skis and snowshoes, what exciting pastimes the winter would offer. A farm is surely a fine place on which to rear children.

"I come back to the old farm" a successful Islander abroad said last summer when on holiday here, "when life falls so that nothing satisfies me, least of all myself. I picture the old place, and it calls me to return. So I come back home. I walk the lanes and the paths I knew in childhood, and find peace of mind and heart once more. I stand on a hilltop and look out over the countryside and know that in the serenity of it all, farm-life is good."

"Some folks can't understand why we don't sell our little ranch in the foothills now while prices are high" a mother in a far state once wrote. "Well, we have tried moving from one town to another, following job after job. Most of the wages were high; but we gained more restlessness than contentment. Now we have three little boys, aged seven to 11, and we want them to take root on a farm. We want them to be as one with the muscular power of a cow-pony as it picks its way up and down the rock-strewn trails. We want them to know the haunts of the native flowers, to have room for pets of their own. We want them to know the peace that comes from stretching out in the breezy shade of an old poplar, and the luscious taste of their own roasted ears of corn, and watermelons freshly gathered."

"We want them to pause in the fragrant dark air of the cottonwood creeks, and distinguish between the calls of the yellowhammers and the larks and the turkey pouls contentedly perking as they search for grasshoppers among the wild sunflowers and sagebrush. We want them to sing, whistle, or shout without fear of disturbing others - to look at dusk over the little green fertile valley, and know that old friends and true neighbors dwell where each light shines."

"No, we're not selling. We are going back to that little ranch in the hills."

The storm windows were put on today. At the time, the eyes pasturing at the foot of the front meadow there by the stream commenced to move toward the upland pasture where they rest at night. The spreader, which now with other chores follows the winter schedule, came to the barnyard from spreading manure from box-stall and stay on a field up the rise.

But now night is come. It brings the moonlight, and a end to the cares of the day.

Until tomorrow --- Diary --- Good-night.

MARY HAWORTH Unbalanced Teen Ager Terrorizes His Family

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Our son Guy, 19, has troubled us for years with his outbursts. I am deeply concerned about his mental health and want of temper control. Yet a recent visit to a local psychiatrist showed "no instability".

Psychological tests in his junior year of high school showed: Above average social adjustment; below average home adjustment; average emotional stability and slight hostility.

In anger he has slammed his fist through a door panel, browbeaten the dogs, slugged a brother and a sister. And last evening, when I refused him the car, after he had called me ugly names, he threw a muddy shoe across the room and kicked a dog. I am almost afraid of him at such times.

Routinely he wishes me dead and occasionally says the same of his dad, but the message is for me.

His room is in cyclonic disorder. He wore a mustache for a year and just recently shaved off a beard. He prefers long hair. At college he couldn't get along with two different room mates and requested a room to himself against our wishes. With a high I. Q., he makes just passing grades.

When displeased with us, he packs a bag and hitchhikes wherever he sees fit, returning when he likes. Anything we may say or do is ignored.

In the past, month he has been involved in a college brawl resulting in two black eyes; in damage to our car; in a traffic accident, during a hitchhike which demolished both cars; and wrecking of our car because he'd left the keys in the ignition. All of which he laughs off.

Last summer his dad said if he, Guy, wanted to continue in college, he'd have to earn $150 towards this year's tuition. This led to another outburst, another hitchhike trip and a discouragement on parents' responsibility to educate their young. He spent most of the summer living a round home, sleeping and eating. Intermittently he worked a four or five jobs, none for long, always quickly spending what-
