Supersonic Airliner Set For Discussion

LONDON (AP) — Britain and France will start talks today aimed at producing a jointly built supersonic airliner capable of carrying 120 passengers from London to New York in three hours, the aviation ministry announced Friday.

The talks will take place at the aviation ministry here between government teams of experts led by British Aviation Minister Peter Thorneycroft and his French opposite number, Robert Buron.

If the first exploratory stage of the project is successful the two nations will spend more than £100,000,000 to produce a prototype. And if that goes well, the world's first supersonic passengers will fly across the North Atlantic in 1970.

Several British and French aircraft builders have thought about this project. The most likely contenders to emerge from the field of competitors, men in the industry say, are the British Aircraft Corporation and the French Sud-Aviation.

BUILD WARPLANES

British Aircraft builds Britain's nuclear missile carrying-Vulcan bombers; Sud-Aviation makes the jet Caravelle.

Teams of experts and designers from both companies have been researching the supersonic project more than two years. They suggest an aircraft frame designed mainly by Sud-Aviation and carrying engines from Bristol Siddley, a subsidiary of British Aircraft.

The drawing board project worked out by the two designing firms foresees a long fuselage with swept-back, narrow delta wings. The wing-span would be narrower than that of a conventional jet plane.

The airliner would fly at 1,400 miles an hour, well over twice the speed of any commercial aircraft now.

Embargo On Cuban Imports Enlarged By United States

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States has enlarged its embargo on imports from Cuba a g h t to include products from any country made in whole or in part from Cuban materials.

Canadian authorities here, informed of the U.S. decision which goes into effect at midnight, said the extension likely will prove a nuisance to some Canadian exporters.

For example, Canada imports some sugar from Cuba and this may go into general production of biscuits and other confectionery, some of which may be exported to the U.S.

This sort of trade, described by a Canadian official as "small but valuable," could be blocked or slowed down by the need to satisfy U.S. authorities that no Cuban materials are involved.

The action also was designed to block shifts out of the U.S. of certain industries — such as the Florida cigar industry— which in the past depended mainly on Cuban tobacco.

Recently, a Canadian immigration officer stationed in New York toured the south and cautually suggested to Tampa cigarmakers they might wish to reestablish their industry in Canada in order to obtain continued supplies of Cuban leaf tobacco.

Under the treasury department's tightening of its embargo, cigars made with Cuban wrappers will not be allowed into the U.S. so that even if the Tampa industry did decide to relocate in Canada, the U.S. market would be closed.

Beauty Parlor Has Returned To Budapest

BUDAPEST (AP)—That capitalistic device, the beauty parlor, is bringing chic back to Budapest and promoting the ruling party's program to convince the Hungarian people Communism can deliver the goods.

For the equivalent of 75 cents, a girl can get a shampoo and and for $1.20 a facial.

The day is gone when makeup was sinful and nail polish considered decadent. Beauty parlors are increasing throughout Budapest and the government says this city of 1,000,000 by 1965 will have 864 beauty salons.

A cartoon in the humor magazine Ludas Matyi gives an insight into the Hungarian situation today.

It depicts the staff of a Budapest office wearing grinning halloween masks. All, that is, except one man. His face is downcast.

Says the office manager, pointing an accusing finger:

"Why can't you be happy like the rest?"

The cartoon's publication is an admission that the authorities know the happy looks are sometimes bogus.

The attempt to win the allegiance of the people is masterminded by the party chief and premier, Janos Kadar, who rode to power as Soviet tanks crushed the 1956 revolt.

He and his followers evidently believe that ultimate victory will be theirs if they can supply things the people want and if they can sell themselves as wishing to serve, no bludgeon, the population.

Opening lead—king of hearts.

This deal occurred in a tournament played ten years ago in Italy. Declarer with the South hand was Micael Giovine, co-inventor of the Marmic system. The contract was six spades and he went down one.

Greatly bothered by the outcome, since he could have made the slam, Giovine next day presented the North-South cards to Jean Besse, Swiss star, and asked him to play the hand.

Besse also went down and so did Roger Trezel, Pierre Jais, Adam Meredith and many other well-known European experts when they were asked by Besse to play the hand. Only Fritz Goudsmidt of Holland found the right line of play.

This rather extraordinary series of failures is even more remarkable when it is considered that the correct method of play is self-evident once it is pointed out. Apparently, the hand produces a blind spot among expert players.

What South should do is ruff the heart lead in dummy, cash the A-K of clubs, discarding the jack of hearts, and then ruff the queen of clubs with the ace of spades.

He then plays a trump to the queen and leads a fourth round of clubs, discarding the queen of hearts. It does not matter to declarer whether the spades were originally divided 3-1 or 2-2 because the contract is now sure to make regardless of what is returned when the club is ruffed.

Dummy has the king of spades as an entry for the good club tricks and there is only one adverse trump left.

The suggested line of play is more likely to succeed than any other method. It wins whenever the defenders' cards are divided normally, that is, when the clubs break 3-2 (68 percent) and when the spades are divided either 2-2 or 3-1 (90 percent).

There is nothing really complicated about the hand, but, for some mysterious reason, most of the experts fell down on the job.
