Reactions Vary To Open Winter

SUMMERSIDE — Old timers say they can't recall a winter when the roads haven't been blocked by at least one snow storm long before this date, and although many people are happy about this condition, others are extremely unhappy.

Many truckers who were depending on hauling snow have been idle with the consequent hardships resulting in some cases. Men who depend for at least some winter employment on snow shovelling haven't been needed and operators of snow plows have been unable to pick up the overtime they usually look forward to.

One man associated with the government garage at St. Eleanor's who wished to remain anonymous, stated it's been many a moon since we had a winter when the roads haven't been blocked for at least a short period long before now. He added that several secondary roads were plugged for a short period as the result of a storm around the first of this month, but traffic kept moving on the main highways.
