THERE IS MONEY IN IT.

If Your Poultry Do Not Pay-Then Let the Women Take Charge-Then See the Change.

When it has been proved over and over again that there is money to be made in keeping hens, why is it that so few farmers get any of that money? I suppose there is a good many reasons, but none of them are good ones.

Occasionally a farmer finds that the poultry paid pretty well, so he resolves to expand the business, and the way he goes about it is to double the number of hens, but not to double the accommodations for them. The house, rather crowded before, is now packed full, the hens being compelled to roost on everything available in the house.

The house gets full of lice as soon as spring opens; the hens do not lay well, nor hatch well; disease attacks them, and disgust with the whole business causes the farmer to neglect them more than ever. Now if this same man had increased his stock of cows or pigs, he would have had no such troubles.

He would have provided accommodations suited to the increased number; he would not have been too big of his foolishness as trying to cram into a space not too big for one. If he had used the same judgment in providing extra room for the extra number of hens kept, he would have found a profit in keeping them. Another reason why some farmers fail to get their own living by eating "bugs" in summer, and what grain they can pick up in the barn yard in winter.

The idea of feeding them as regularly as the rest of the farm stock does not strike them favorably; when they throw the hens a quart or so of corn and so on, they quickly it disappears. The cost of feeding them assumes large proportions. A remedy for this is, to let the wife or daughter have entire charge of the hens; give them a good house to keep them in, and all the feed they ask for, with one understanding that the feed to be paid for at market price and feeding being a profitable lot of poultry.

The lot of pullets I bought last fall shows how little feed the poultry gets on some farms. These pullets were enough to lay, but were very poor, only weighing two and three-quarter pounds apiece. They cost me just 29 cents a head. Was there any profit to be made from them? I expect to raise them at that price and in that condition. After I had them about four weeks three or four of them commenced laying; I established me to see how soon they began to improve in appearance under liberal feeding and care. Why can't we all understand that the feed to be worth feeding at all, we should feed them so that the half-fed animal is the one we always lose money on. And no stock will pay so big a dividend on the investment as hens.—Stockman and Farmer.

Exchange Beneficial. Farmers intelligently exchanging farm products for other goods, even at the same prices per ton, may secure not only an increase in feeling value, but also gain in fertility. Market conditions do not restrict the farmer in the fertilizing constituents of feed.

Sweet Corn Profitable. Corn, either field or sweet, is the best crop a farmer can raise, but I find sweet corn far more profitable to raise, easier to handle and quicker turned into cash than field corn. I expect to raise this season 20 acres of corn, one-half of which will be sweet, which I have to draw six miles to the factory, otherwise I should raise sweet corn every year.

Cutting of Timber. Durability of timber is increased by timely cutting. Even white birch cut in July and August in full leaf will remain sound for two years or more. Cut in March it will hardly last a year.

White birch will make fairly durable bean poles if cut in mid-summer. Dr. J. F. Kinchloe, uses chisel and saw to cut the poles, and contracts that the trees shall be cut in late summer when in full leaf. The stakes are also stronger. Water-seasoned lumber is the best for building. The water washes out the destructive acids of the sap. Logs cut in winter that cannot be sawed until there is danger of decay or damage from frost, should be preserved if thrown into the mill-pond.

Very little hand hoeing is necessary. If you make your rows straight and keep the weeds down by thorough hoeing and weeding. It may be well to pick off a few of the blossoms, thereby insuring larger, finer fruit. But I have never found anything but harm result from leaf pruning. The sun will scald the fruit badly, both in the North and in the South, and the "spring" of the tomatoes are invariably made under thick leaves. The fruit rots badly when it rests on the ground, but we have found stakes in large quantities expensive work. The better remedy is plants of upright, stocky growth. This is one of the virtues of the Dwarf Champion, the vine resembling a potato vine. But the best sort of tomatoes are coming also to possess this quality in great measure. The best varieties well tested at present, both for home and market use are the Early Essex Hybrid, the Dwarf Champion, Climax, Matchless and Ignomus. The two latter are larger than the others. I have used Paris green in solution to kill the worms and found it effectual. This was done when the fruit was very small and the fruit wiped as farm notes.

Timothy hay and oats are expensive feeds. It does not follow because a farmer raises these crops that he should feed them to his other products, equally useful, may be purchased at a less cost per pound of actual nutriment.

The feeding value of plants differ. Oats and corn, hay possesses different food values. Some kinds of food produce fat, some muscle and some wool hair and milk. Nature cannot be fooled in the matter of feeding. The successful stock feeder must study the different food values.

With an ordinary grass crop, the loss of water while curing hay in the field may be from 2 to 5 tons per acre; the loss is larger in the clovers than in the grasses (Illinois Bulletin 5). The loss is weight by drying after storing may be from 200 to 400 lbs. per ton.

Found a Rich Gold Mine. LOWER JORDON BAY, N.S., July 3.—Mr. Samuel Locke, of this place, has just discovered a gold mine here that pans out 100 per cent. of pure metal to the ton. It was a rich vein of sound health to which he was restored, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and which he would not exchange for any other mine in America.

All last winter he suffered from kidney trouble which would not yield to the prescriptions of several doctors. A few months ago Mr. Locke heard of the good work done by Dodd's kidney pills and tried them with the invariable result. Today he is well and thinks no praise too great for this wonderful remedy. His neighbors are much interested in what they describe as a marvelous cure.

Take time by the forelock, and Putter's Emulsion by the spoonful, and your cough will vanish and your rhy checks return.
