Dominion Parliament.

AN EXCITING DEBATE ON IRISH HOME RULE—M'NEILL MOVES AN AMENDMENT TO CURRAN'S RESOLUTION—THE SPEAKER COMPELLED TO INTERFERE—ADJOURNMENT OF THE DISCUSSION.

On the 21st inst. Mr. J. J. Curran, M. P. for Montreal Centre, moved the following resolution, of which he had given the customary notice:—

"That the parliament of Canada in the year 1882 adopted a humble address to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, expressing the hope that a just measure of home rule would be granted to Ireland, and that in the year 1886, by resolution of the House of Commons of Canada, the sentiments of said address to Her Most Gracious Majesty were earnestly reiterated and the hope expressed that a measure of home rule satisfactory to the people of Ireland would be passed by the Imperial Parliament, and that such measure of home rule has not been granted to the Irish people, but on the contrary there has been introduced into the Imperial House of Commons by Her Majesty's government a coercion bill enacting the most stringent coercion measures for Ireland, by which the Irish people will be deprived of rights most dear to all British subjects."

"That this house has learned with profound regret of the introduction into the Imperial House of Commons of the coercion bill above mentioned, and protests against its adoption as being subversive of the rights and liberties of Her Majesty's subjects in Ireland. That this house again expresses the hope that there may speedily be granted to Ireland such a measure of Home Rule as is enjoyed in the Dominion of Canada, which, whilst satisfying the national aspirations of the people of Ireland for self-government, shall also be consistent with the integrity of the empire as a whole."

"That the granting of Home Rule to Ireland will fittingly crown the already glorious reign of Her Most Gracious Majesty as a constitutional sovereign, will come with special appropriateness in this, her jubilee year, and, if possible, render Her Majesty more dear to the hearts of her already devoted and loyal subjects."

"That the present resolutions be forthwith forwarded to the Right Hon. the Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister, to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M. P., and Charles Stewart Parnell, M. P."

MR. CURRAN supported the resolutions in an eloquent speech of an hour and a quarter. He quoted reports and resolutions of public meetings at Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Toronto and Ottawa. And also the resolutions of the Quebec Legislature to show the drift of popular opinion in Canada, and cited Chapleau's reference to Home Rule in his Montreal banquet speech. He enumerated the coercive measures passed during a century and asserted that the system had proved a failure. He quoted precedents for proposed interference with affairs of another government by citing the resolutions of 1882 and 1886, and the discussion in the English parliament respecting the treatment of the people of Naples, Poland and other countries by their respective governments. He paid a high compliment to Parnell and indignantly referred to the charges made against him by the Times newspaper that he approved of the murder of Burke and Cavendish. Parnell had done much for Ireland but no less for England in guiding the Irish people in constitutional matters. The Irish people of Canada had more than once showed themselves willing to take up arms in support of the British crown. In the Fenian invasion of 1866 a regiment of volunteers which went among the first to the front was commanded by his friend Mr. Devlin, and in the Northwest rebellion the president of the Home Rule Association in Montreal (C. J. Doherty) rose from a sick bed to go to the front. In an eloquent peroration Mr. Curran expressed the hope that in this jubilee year, when Her Majesty's subjects everywhere were rejoicing, Ireland would not be left as one place where discontent and sullenness prevailed.

Patterson, of Essex, seconded the resolution. M'NEILL, OF NORTH BRUCE, commended the spirit and motives of Curran, but held that the warmth of his sympathy had led him into a mistake in view of the duties of this parliament. It was true that this parliament was committed to home rule, but this was home rule with separation. Gladstone's home rule bill, to which Blake had sought last year to commit this house, was of such a character as to drive into opposition the ablest members of the Liberal party, including the most eminent former ministers. The people of Great Britain had condemned that proposition. Curran's motion was want of confidence in the government of Great Britain, the parliament of that country, and even the electorate of the mother country. It was fair to ask that this parliament make some all-wances for the difficulty of the task which the Imperial Parliament were asked to perform. He argued at length against the resolution on the ground of undue interference with matters under the jurisdiction of another parliament. Canada would be quick to resent Imperial interference with the difficult legislation of this country. At this time, particularly, it was desirable to treat the mother country with that courtesy which we expect from the imperial authorities. McNeill quoted from the views of judges and other authorities of the condition of Ireland which had led to the crimes bill. The crimes act was much to be deplored, as well as all legislation against crime, but the first duty of the government was to protect life and property. He heard from Mr. Curran condemnation of one kind of coercion, but nothing against coercion by organizations against the law-abiding people, against whose lives and property outrages, and attacks had been made. He moved an amendment stating that parliament retained a warm interest in Irish affairs and adhered to its previous resolutions as to Home Rule, but that in the absence of full information on the crimes bill and the condition of Ireland, this house is not in a position to express an opinion on this measure.

KENNY OF HALIFAX warmly supported Curran's resolution. It gave him pleasure that nearly his first speech should be an eulogy on the institutions of this country, which he paid in asking that the same principles of Government should be given to Ireland. People brought up under the free institutions of this country were intensely loyal, and none more so than the Irish people of Canada. In festal gatherings of the Irish people the Queen was always enthusiastically honored. He did not believe there was more crime in Ireland than here. The only species of crimes committed grew out of ancient misrule. It would, he thought, be a wise, prudent and gracious act to give to Ireland the same privileges of local government as Canada enjoys. He regarded the coercion measure as the most retrograde legislation of our day. He recognized the fact that this house had a mandate to attend to local concerns and that generally it was not advisable to consider extraneous matter, but all that concerns the empire concerns us. The argument had been made that the people of Great Britain had condemned the home rule measure, but he remembered that in old countries prejudices were strong and constitutional changes came slow. Yet he hoped that the dark days of Ireland's trouble were passing away and that a brighter day was beginning to dawn.

FLYNN, OF RICHMOND, spoke in favor of the measure. He held that the danger of trouble in Canada from Irish people in the United States was reason enough for the interference of this parliament with Irish legislation. In the course of his speech he stated that in Nova Scotia, before responsible government, the province was on the brink of war, but since then peace and contentment had reigned. Flynn apparently forgot that he belonged to the Repeal party.

O'BRIEN, OF MUSKOKA, made a fierce attack on the land league and home rule associations. He charged the league with responsibility for the Irish crimes, and said Archbishop Lynch had written a mischievous and insulting letter to Randolph Churchill. He declared that the legislation of this country would not be at the dictation of United Fenians. Referring to the crusade against the Governor-General, he said that editor O'Brien, if he should open a campaign here, would not require police surveillance, but might require police protection. Casey, Wallace, Burns, Bergan and Welsh continued the discussion. Laurier moved the adjournment of the debate.
