FIRESUBSCRIBER—"Sir, curse your paper! Send it to—" Editor—John, change the gentleman's address—New Zealand Graphic.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of the Boston steamer. There will be no steamer sailing from Charlottetown for Boston on Thursday next.

THE police arrested a sailor Saturday night for being drunk and disorderly. After he was confined in his cell and had gone to sleep, a respectable truckman appeared at the police station and complained of his little boy having been struck several times by the prisoner.

In the police court, Monday, Patrick Prunty, disorderly driving, was fined $6, or 20 days. Andrew MacQuillan, assault, 5 cents and costs. John Wilson, drunk and disorderly, $1, or 4 days. Daniel MacNevin, drunk and disorderly, $2, or 8 days. Elizabeth Finley, for whom the Magistrate was seeking a place, was taken charge of by the Salvation Army.

THE Harvest Moonlight Excursion, of which an advertisement appears in another column, takes place next Monday evening on board the str. Jacques Cartier, and promises to be one of the events of the season. The military band will be in attendance, and those who wish to have a good time would do well to purchase a ticket early, as only a limited number have been issued.

THE steamer Worcester, which was disabled off Canso a few days ago and towed into Hawkebury for repairs, could not be repaired at that port and was towed to Pictou by the tug William Aitken, where she arrived at 11 o'clock Monday morning. She went on the slip at the latter port.

MR. Gardiner, manager of the North Atlantic S. S. Co., of Boston, is now in Pictou, and while the steamer is repaired he will come to Charlottetown to re-arrange the regular sailings of the steamer.

THE Steamer Coban, Capt. Fraser, from Montreal arrived at this port at daylight Monday morning. Besides a general cargo she had as passengers: W. B. Ross, W. V. Wilson, W. F. Egg, John Delaby, Wm. Reid, Mrs. McLeod and infant, Robert Reid, Albert D., William D., Amelia D., Annie Simmons, Wm. Palmer. The steamer sailed at noon same day for Sydney and Newfoundland. Her outward cargo consisted of 186 bales hay, shipped by John Aylward; 7 head cattle, by H. Henderson; 1 cow, by P. Duffy, 3 rolls leather, by L. P. Tanton. Rev. Matthew Anderson was a passenger.

half the community did not back it up. I believe people were given liquor to vote for the Scott Act. I know of this being done. I would not favor the re-enactment of the Scott Act, because it caused perjury. That would be my chief reason. Some people cannot enjoy themselves at social gatherings without liquor. I have seen ice officers were blocked and hindered from enforcing the law. I would not prefer a prohibitory law because I believe it never could be enforced. I don't know anything about Maine. I think a stringent license law best. I don't like the present law with the bar rooms open everywhere. I think it would be better if they were all closed up. I supported the Scott Act at first, but not altogether on my own convictions. It made social enemies of neighbors and caused perjury. Seventeen years ago trade and shipping were good, money plentiful and liquor cheap. At present the people haven't the means to drink. I remember one particular occasion when a temperance man gave a man liquor to vote for the Scott Act. The liquor trade never affected my men because I don't employ drinking men. I believe drink makes men less valuable laborers.

Rev. Mr. Brewer (sworn)—Have lived 3 years here and four years in the vicinity from 1870 to 1874. As far as my knowledge goes the effect of the Scott Act was good. I don't know of more than one suspected place in the upper part of the city when I labored there. I am very positive about good resulting from the Scott Act and the law was a help to me as a moral teacher. Mr. Brewer also scribbled the Harbor Light work; 75 per cent of the men went to no church; 50 per cent were Roman Catholics; the work was done on non-denominational lines; 75 per cent of those who took the pledge kept it. The drink habit was altogether the cause of such dissoluteness as had existed among them. This work was done during free rum days. He attributed the moral improvement of a certain locality alluded to by a previous witness as due to police activity and moral influence. An instance of destitution due to liquor was given. The wife of a mechanic had given him a bill of liquor sent to her by a liquor seller for one month's grog to her husband for $16.92, (copy of bill certified by magistrate was handed in as evidence). The man would not have been able to get this liquor or the seller to collect the bill under the Scott Act. I think legalization of the trade in any form would not help the public conscience. I prefer the present system to license. The Methodist church has pronounced against license in any form. (Mr. Clarke here attempted to put words in the rev. gentleman's mouth and received his rebuke therefore)

Mr. Clarke—There are 3 or 4 places now where liquor is sold openly in the upper part of the city where formerly I only knew of one suspected place. I have found the police quick to answer when information is given.

Mr. Giguat—I favor Prohibition except for medicinal, scientific and sacramental purposes.

Mr. Giguat read a passage from the Bible, recommending a little wine for the stomach's sake and often infirmities, etc.

Mr. Brewer said his church discouraged the use of fermented wine. He was not there to enter into controversies, but he believed the church's ruling was in accord with the divine law. He considered it against the divine law to drink fermented wine as a beverage. The Bible will not allow men to use what is destructive of physical health and morals.

Rev. Mr. McAulay (sworn)—Am a Roman Catholic priest of Charlottetown. Have been a priest 2 1/2 years. I don't think the Scott Act had the effect of stopping liquor selling. In the opinion of the majority it restricted natural rights and was not supported by public sentiment. I don't think the efforts enforced the law. It did not stop drunkenness. It created perjury and deceit. Low people without moral responsibility took hold of the business, and other sins besides drunkenness were committed. I think the habitual violation of one law leads people to violate others as well. My idea is that good legislation and temperance and religious work together are needed to suppress drunkenness. Neither can be effective alone. I do not think the divine law forbids the moderate use of wine or of any of God's works, or of any combus on of them. I look upon drunkenness as the sin of the drunkard and not of the drink. If alcohol were essentially evil it would be evil to license it. I don't think God has made anything essentially evil. Liquor must be sold, so let us have the most restrictive law possible.

To Dr. McLeod—I consider the liquor of commerce God's creature. I consider the effects of drinking are not good. The effects of the drink trade have in the main been bad. The moderate use of intoxicants I don't consider tends to excess. I can not say I know of any moderate drinkers who have become excessive drinkers. I think by putting the trade in reputable hands the evil results are reduced. I do not believe prohibition well enforced would do good, because I do not think it can be enforced. It is an irrational law to deprive a man of the use of his natural rights. I do not consider a law which prevents a man from injuring himself or his family irrational. Then you restrict the abuse, not the use. I believe prohibition brought about in a certain community by moral persuasion was good.

Dr. McLeod—If the sentiment of the people would support prohibition would it be good?

Ans.—The way I look at it, the people would not get up to this point. If it could be brought about generally by the free will of the people, it would be good. If four-fifths of the people were favorable to prohibition I don't think—being enacted—it would educate the other fifth. The Scott Act is probably better enforced in the country than in the city. There is a better sentiment.
