On Leave Home From Korean Front

Home on leave after a year's service in Korea is C.Q.M.S. A. S. Clarkin, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Clarkin of this city. After several months training in Fort Lewis, in the United States, he sailed for the Korean theatre in April of last year.

Visiting Yokohama, Japan, on his way to the war area he left that country via Sasabo and landed in Pusan, Korea, in which country he served for a year. He recently returned to this continent via the United States troopship, Pte. Meunimori. Just before leaving Japan they were temporarily stationed near Kure at the site of the Division Battle School.

Staff Sgt. Clarkin first joined the Army in the Signals in June 1930 and remained with them, going overseas in 1941 as a member of the Third Division Signals. He served in England, France, Holland, Belgium and Germany before returning to Canada in 1945.

He transferred to the Service Corps (R.C.A.S.C.) in administration work and has been with that unit ever since. Before the 25th Brigade was organized for Korean service he had been stationed at Halifax and Camp Borden.

Trip From Japan

He said they had a good trip home from Japan "subject to the usual gripes attendant on travelling on a troopship". The ship was designed to carry 2,200 troops but on this trip had only 1,100 Canadians, the only troops aboard. They made the crossing in two weeks. He said the weather was fair and paid tribute to the cooks and stewards of the ship who were very friendly and frequently passed out extra pies, cakes and cookies to boys on the sun deck.

They landed in Vancouver on a Sunday and the returning soldiers were not overly happy at having to parade that day in a welcome celebration. However, they were on board a train that same day on their way back east. Staff Sgt. Clarkin went on to Halifax where he was met by his wife the former Miss Lois Brady of this city. Other Islanders, however, were met on the train by representatives of Eastern Command Headquarters, Halifax, and provided with passes, transportation and pay so they could leave the train at Sackville, N.B., and get home quicker.

Mr. Clarkin is presently spending a 60-day leave here and when it expires will report back to Number 1 Personnel Depot, Halifax.

On Leave For Happy Event

Home on leave from the Canadian Army Camp at Petawawa is Cpl. L. J. (Andy) Gallant, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gallant, 30 Cedar Street, Summerside. The purpose of his visit to the Province is to be married July 21 to Miss Roma Steel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Steel of this city. They will be married at St. Dunstan's Basilica by Rev. F. Bolger.

Cpl. Gallant, brother of the Summerside sports figure, "Mooney" Gallant, enlisted with the Army first in 1942 in the Artillery, but went overseas with the Infantry in the Algonquin Regiment from North Bay, Ont. He saw service in England, France, Holland, Belgium and Germany before being wounded at the Leopold Canal and returning to this country in 1945 aboard a hospital ship.

Following a term in Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax, for treatment he returned to this Province. He worked in the Mess at the R.C.A.F. station, Summerside, until his re-enlistment in the Army. After going to Halifax over a year ago, he was posted to the Royal Canadian Dragoons at Petawawa.

Local Man With "Nootka" Gun Crew

SASEBO, Japan—The Canadian destroyer Nootka (Cdr. R. M. Steele, Rothesay, N. B.) left this United Nations naval base recently for a well-earned rest period in Hong Kong after her most active patrol in five months of operations in the Far East.

This latest patrol was a 12-day rampage up the east coast of Korea in which she fought a blistering 12-minute duel with Communist shore batteries at the port of Chongjin, carried out daily raids on coastwise rail lines and protected friendly islands off the enemy coast.

Cdr. Steele had high praise for the performance put up by the Nootka's gun crews throughout the 12-minute engagement, and particularly for the crew of "X" who had their mounting getting away a salvo every three seconds at the peak of the fight. During the engagement the ammunition hoist to "X" gun lost its power but the ammunition supply party immediately began passing the shells by hand and kept the rate up to normal standard.

Among the gun crew members who figured prominently in the engagement were a number of Maritimers, including A.B. Reginald Cullen, of Charlottetown.

Seek To Have U. S. Iron Ore Mining Resume

PITTSBURGH, July 9 (CP)—The steel industry today was reported preparing to ask the United Steelworkers of America (G.I.O.) to drop their strike barriers enough to permit resumption of iron-ore production in Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Steel company sources said the request would be made within a few hours. A union spokesman said there would be no comment from President Philip Murray until he receives the request.

Executives of 10 large steel companies met in New York with ore-mining officials and decided to ask the union to end the strike of 23,000 ore miners—a companion to the strike of 600,000 steelworkers. The miners, members of the U. S. W., struck in sympathy with steelworkers.

The steel industry says it will be shut down next winter unless iron ore is permitted to move to the mills before ice on the Great Lakes halts shipping.

The move to get the iron-ore miners back to work was taken as an indication that the steel industry sees little hope of a quick settlement of the strike which began 39 days ago.

Brother & Sister Have First Dramatic Meeting On P. E. Island Car Ferry

A sister and brother who had never seen each other before and who had never even been under the same roof, met here this week for the first time in their lives. She is 59 and he is 79.

She is Sister Mary Dunstan, the former Miss Agnes Kelly, Tracadie, and he is Mr. Patrick Edmund Kelly, Boston. Both are the children of the late Mr. and Mrs. (Margaret Walsh) Patrick C. Kelly, Vernon River.

Mr. Kelly left home when a boy of 18 to go to Boston. After he left his sister was born in Tracadie where the family had moved. Following her early education in this Province, she entered the Order of the Sisters of St. Anne, Lachine, Que., and was almost immediately transferred to British Columbia where she has been ever since, excepting for six years spent in Alaska.

Although it is her third trip to the Island since she left here in 1912 she never met her brother who did not return for 57 years.

Their first meeting had an element of the dramatic as well as showing the long arm of coincidence. Sister Mary Dunstan was two days later than expected in reaching here, but she knew her brother was coming. On board the M.V. Abegweit, en route from Tormentine to Borden, she asked a stewardess if there was a possibility that he might be on the same trip. As it happened the car in which he was travelling had been the last in line when the Abegweit was loaded on the previous trip and his party had to wait over in Tormentine. It was this happenstance which brought the dramatic meeting between brother and sister on the car ferry.

Family Gathering

Last night they gathered for a large family reunion with another sister, Mrs. John Lacey, Charlottetown, at the home of a nephew, Mr. J. G. Lacey, Mermaid. There were 40 members of the family at supper as they came from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Mrs. John Lacey, the former Miss Georgina Kelly, 77, was also born at Tracadie where she was married 49 years ago by Rev. P. D. McGuigan. Her brother, home to meet the sister he had never seen, went to Boston in 1891. Now retired, he had been actively engaged in the business of installing gasoline pumps in that Massachusetts city.

There are two other members of the family who were not present last night. One brother, Thomas G. Kelly, Trochu, Alberta, and a sister, Catherine, Mrs. William MacKinnon, Wilmington, California.

Driving the car from Boston to bring Mr. Kelly home was his son, John F. Kelly, Woburn, Mass., with his wife and two sons. There were eight grandchildren altogether attending the reunion.

British Commons Grants Life Income For Queen

LONDON, July 9 (Reuters)—The House of Commons tonight decided it will grant the Queen an annual income of £475,000 for life.

The endorsement went unchallenged. No vote on the proposals as a whole was called, because the Commons' feelings on the civil list proposals presented by the Government were made clear in a series of votes on detailed allowances for the Queen and her family.

The Commons rejected 239-211 the Labor Party proposal that the Queen's grant should be reconsidered every 10 years to keep an eye on royal spending.

This proposal was put forward by Opposition Leader Clement Attlee. An amendment from two left-wingers which would have sliced nearly half the Queen's income was defeated 344 to 25.

The proposals now will be presented to the Commons in the form of a bill. Of the money to be paid to the Queen all but £60,000 is intended to meet the out-of-pocket expenses of running the pageants and palaces of the monarchy.

The official Labor Party plan to deprive Prince Charles, 2 1/2-year-old son of the Queen, of his proposed annual income until he is 18 was defeated 231 to 197.

The Commons also brushed aside 313 to 56 a Labor rank-and-file members' proposal to quarter the allowance of £40,000 a year proposed for the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Government had proposed to raise Princess Margaret's annuity from £9,000 to £15,000 when she gets married. Five Labor members challenged this but were defeated 258 to 112.

The government proposals were drafted by an all-party committee, which did not report unanimously on all points.

The committee had recommended that Prince Charles should have 28 fight with Rocky Marciano.

an estimated total of $150,000 until his 18th birthday. The money would come from the Duchy of Cornwall revenues.

Richard Butler, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who offered the committee's recommendations, said the Commons should take into consideration that the cost of living has almost trebled since the beginning of the century.

Hot Conviction Fight May Injure Republican Chances At Election

(By Don Whitehead)

CHICAGO, July 9 (AP)—Out of the Taft-Eisenhower presidential battle stalked the spectre today of a Republican Party torn by its own internal fury—and possibly an easy prey for the Democrats in November.

This was the ghost that haunted this 25th national Republican convention.

Harmony was a fiction in the mouths of the platform speakers who talked of unity and of closed ranks.

With each passing hour, the chances for unity received a blow behind the ears.

Fight To Finish This was a no-compromise fight to the finish between Senator Robert Taft of Ohio and General Eisenhower—the front-running presidential nomination candidate.

Can either side forget the harsh words and the gall of defeat to throw eager support to the winner? This was a question with which the peace makers must struggle in the months before the November election.

For two days, the activities on the convention floor have been merely window dressing. The real struggle has been going on downtown in the convention credentials committee over contested delegates and in hotel-room meetings of the strategists who pull the strings.

In reality, it began last fall when Senator Taft opened his early drive to line up delegate strength. It boiled over when Taft forces took the lion's share of disputed delegate seats by vote of the Republican national committee—controlled by Taft supporters.

Out of these pre-convention manoeuvres, the Eisenhower people built up an issue: they charge Taft was trying to steamroller the convention with ruthless, bulldozing methods.

Actually, without this issue there are many observers who believe the Eisenhower forces would have been left without a solid base from which to fight Taft.

No Real Peace-Making Today, the Taft forces made a compromise move in the credentials committee. They reversed their position and gave up 13 contested Louisiana votes to Eisenhower.

But there were no signs of real peace-making. There still was talk of a deadlock convention and the possibility of a dark-horse emerging. But the professionals shrugged off this talk. In their books it was either Eisenhower or Taft.

In the lobby and outside the Conrad Hilton Hotel, supporters of General Douglas MacArthur tried to work up a convention fever for their man. But the demonstration had more sound and fury than real substance. One thing was crystal clear: the Republican Party has a tremendous job ahead in patching up wounds and healing the sores opened by their fight among themselves.

the last war showed conclusively that it was the aircraft carriers which turned the tide against German submarines and that the carriers will be the kingspins in any new battle of the Atlantic.

The carrier advocates won. The navy air arm now has two fighter squadrons and two anti-sub squadrons which divide their time between the Magnificent and the Shearwater land base at Dartmouth, N. S.

One of the Maggie's drawbacks, her parliamentary critics said, was the fact she couldn't handle jet planes. The new carrier will be able to do so.

Open Verdict In Hooper Fatality

A verdict that Lester Hooper came to his death as a result of injuries received in an accident while a passenger in an automobile driven by Albert Melvin Bell at Chepstow at approximately 7:30 on the 15th of June was brought in at a Coroner's Inquest on Tuesday.

Coroner Dr. L. E. Prowse presided and John Nicholson represented the Crown. Members of the jury were: H. L. Hardy (foreman), Vernon D. Currie, Hawley C. Crockett, Louis P. MacMahon, Elmer J. Campbell, Spurgeon W. Leard and J. T. Davies.

Albert Melvin Bell, Charlottetown, the only witness not previously examined said that he went on a fishing party with a group of men as described in previous evidence. Hooper wanted to go to Souris to get some things. Bell was driving the car and said he must have fallen asleep. The roughness of the ditch awakened him and he saw the bank. (That was just before the crash).

The witness said he noticed the car sway a little while driving but thought it was gravel on the road as he was not going over 45 miles per hour. He had had two bottles of beer at home and another in the car. He also had a drink that was given him out of a bottle they had picked up at a taxi stand before they left. He had taken the car without the owner's consent but did not think the owner would mind as he had driven the car on one occasion before.
