

THE FAIR GOD.

BOOK TWO.

CHAPTER XI.

Before the womanly tones of the last singer ceased, the old man dropped his staff, and, lifting his hand against his breast, struck his cheeks, and in a voice clear and vibratory as the blast of a shell, a voice that filled the whole hall, and startled maid and king alike, began his chant.

QUETZAL.

Beloved of the Sun! Mother of the Brave! Azatlan, the North-born! Heard by thee

In my far launched voice! I sing to thy listening children of thee and Heaven.

Vale in the Sun, where dwell the Gods! Sum of the beautiful art thou! Thy forests are flowering trees: of crystal and gold thy mountains; and liquid light are thy rivers.

Flowing all murmurous with songs, over Beds of stars. O Vale of Gods, the summery Sheen that flecks Earth's seas, and kisses its mountains.

And fairly floods its plains, we know it is of thee—

A sign sent from afar, that we may Foesibly learn how beautiful is Heaven!

The singer rested a moment; then, looking in the eyes of the king, with a rising voice, he continued:

Richest hall in all the Vale is Quetzal's—

At that name Montezuma started. The minstrel noted well the sign.

O, none so fair as Quetzal's! The winds that play among its silver columns are Love's Light laughter, white of Love is all the air About. From its orient porch the Young Mornings gleam the glory with which they rise

On earth.

First God and fairest was Quetzal. As him O none so full of innocence, And by none were men so loved! Sat he always

In his hall, in deity robed, watching Humanity, its genius, its struggles upward. But most he watch'd its wars—no hero

Fell but he call'd the wand'ring soul in love To rest with him for ever.

Sat he once

Thus watching, and when least expected, in the far North, by stormy Winter sul', up From the snows he saw a Nation rise. Shook their bolts, glistened their shields, flashed the Light of their fierce eyes. A king, in wolf's skin, pointed Southward, and up the hills, through

The air, to the Sun, flew the name—Azatlan. Then march'd they; by day and night they march'd; marched

Ever South, across the desert, up the Mountains, down the mountains; leaping rivers,

Smiting foes, taking cities—thus they march'd;

Thus, a cloud of eagles, rolled they from the North; thus on the South they fell, as autumn Frosts upon the fruits of summer fall.

And now the priests were glad—the singer sang of Heaven; and the warriors were aroused—his voice was like a battle-cry, and the theme was the proud tradition of the conquering march of their fathers from the distant North. Sitting with clasped hands and drooped head, the king followed the chant, like one listening to an oracle. Yet stronger grew the minstrel's voice:

Pas'd

Many years of toil, and still the nation march'd;

Still Southward strode the king; still Sunward rose

The cry of Azatlan! Azatlan! And Warmer, truer, brighter grew the human Love of Quetzal. He saw them reach a lake; As dew its waves were clear; like lover's breath

The wind flew o'er it. 'Twas in the clime of Starry nights—the clime of orange-groves and Plumy palms.

Then Quetzal, from his watching Rose. Aside he flung his sunly symbols. Like a falling star, from the Vale of Gods He dropped, like falling star shot through the Shoreless space; like a golden morning reach'd

The earth—reach'd the lake. Then stay'd the Nation's March. Still Sunward rose the cry, but Southward

Strode the king no more.

In his roomy heart, in The chambers of its love, Quetzal took the Nation. He swore its kings should be his sons—

They should conquer, by the Sun, he swore! In The laughter Lake he bade them build; and up Sprung Fenochitlan, of the human love. Of Quetzal could up rise the fire-towers. On sprang its pile, on a reared its streets. Of stone and wave. And as the city grew, Still stronger grew the love of Quetzal.

Thine

Is the Empire. To the shields again, O Azatlan! 'Twas thus he spoke; and feather'd Crest and oaken spear, the same that from the North came conquering, through the valley, On a wave of war went swiftly floating. Down before the flaming shields fell all the Neighb'ring tribes; open flew the cities' gates;

Fighting kings gave up their crowns; from the hills

The Chichimecan fled; on temple towers The Totec fires to scattering ashes Died. Like a scourge upon the city, like A fire across the plain, like storms adown The mountain such was Azatlan that day It went to battle! Like a monarch mid His people, like a god amid the Heavens, O Azatlan was Azatlan, victor from the Battle, the Empire in its hand!

At this point the excitement of the audience rose into interruption; they clapped their hands and stamped; some shouted.
