The Tiny Folk

claimed Laurie as he quickly drew back his foot. "I'm glad the water I swim in is warmer than that."

He raced ahead. "Come and see this!" he shouted. "I've found a little house."

As Mr. and Mrs. Page with Linda came around the corner of the high rock, they saw Laurie standing in a little room hollowed out in the rocks.

"That is a cave," said Mr. Page. "See how far back it goes!"

"Who lives in here?" Laurie wanted to know. "Who made it?"

"No one lives there. The water made that too. The waves rush in and out and wear away the rocks, leaving spaces like that. There are two more farther along."

Laurie ran ahead to explore them. He poked his head out and shouted "Boo" to Linda who laughed in great glee.

"See that rock standing in the water by itself," said his mother, pointing. "That used to be part of a field once. See the two spruce trees on top of it. The sea broke that away to."

"This is wonderful!" exclaimed Laurie. "Now just what will I find next, I wonder?"
