Local and Other Items.

HERRING.—Usually large quantities of herring are being taken around the coast this spring.

Veri Vidi, Vici! This is true of Hall's Hair Renewer, for it is the great conqueror of gray or faded hair, making it look the same even color of youth.

LOBSTERS.—The fishermen of Miminash took lobsters in their traps on Friday and Saturday of last week. The fishing may now be considered commenced.

A dry, hacking cough keeps the bronchial tubes in a state of constant irritation, which, if not speedily removed, may lead to bronchitis. No prompt remedy can be had than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is both an anodyne and expectorant.

OBITUARY.—Mrs. T. Charles Watson, the talented elocutionist who gave several entertainments in this city several years ago, died in New York on Saturday last, and was buried at Ottawa on the 6th. The floral tributes were numerous. The pall bearers included Sir Adolphe Caron, Sir Fred. Middleton and Senator Clemow.

The value of a remedy should be estimated by its curative properties. According to this standard, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best and most economical blood medicine in the market, because the most pure and concentrated. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

DISPLEASED.—Many of our western friends are displeased that the special train from Summerside to Tignish is run on Saturdays, instead of some other day of the week. They say that this is not in the interest of the West, but the East, as nobody would think of leaving home to come East on Saturday. They have christened the Saturday train "Dummer's Special."

PREACHING.—Mr. Wright, of Pine Hill Cottage, Halifax, will preach next Sabbath, 12th inst., at Long Creek, West River, at 11 a. m., and at Clyde River at 3 p. m.
Mr. Malcolm McLeod, of Pine Hill, will preach in Strathalbyn at 11 a. m., and in Rose Valley at 3 p. m., on Sabbath, 19th inst.
Mr. J. M. McLennan will preach in Brookfield on Sabbath, 12th inst., and in Caledonia on the 19th inst.

AN EXPENSIVE MISTAKE.—The two Arkansas men who thought that they had earned the $1,000 reward offered for the apprehension of Thompson, the murderer of Miss White, at Braintree, Mass., must feel that they have made a mistake. They paid $300 to the cow-boys who made the man whom they have brought to Massachusetts confess, and now a large number of witnesses swear that he is not Thompson.

AN ISLANDER WINS.—The Jacksonville, Fla., Times Union contains a lengthy account of the recent lete day at Pablo beach. The bicycle race for the Christopher gold medal, was among the leading events. The contestants were H. W. Caldwell (the holder of the medal), Fred Davies, Howatt, and Emery. Caldwell led for a time but Howatt collared and soon passed him, as also did Davies. For the remainder of the contest the race was between Howatt and Davies. Howatt won coming in at the close just one second ahead of Davies, and winning the medal amidst the cheers of the spectators. Howatt and Davies are both Island boys. THE EXAMINER congratulates them on their good riding.

CHARLES WATTS.—The Evangelical Alliance of St. John has had under consideration the appointment of a proper person to meet this noted Secularist, Mr. A. D. M. Boyne, who Mr. Watts last year said: "As a member of a Christian Church and one working for the cause of Christ he would like to have Mr. Watts met in debate. He had attended the last two meetings and had expected to see some minister present. Mr. Watts was an able man and a fine speaker. He drew very large audiences. Would it be advisable to meet him? If their cause was the cause of God, as he believed it was, then when a man comes here and throws down the gauntlet he should be met. If he cannot be met and overcome their cause must be a weak one. He believed Mr. Watts could be downed, though he was an able man." It is probable a selection will be made at its next session.

News Notes.

Trade between England and Germany shows a large increase for the past quarter. The New Glasgow steel and forge works have contracts enough to keep them at work for the coming six months.

Seven hundred Canadian cattle fattened for export was the sight witnessed at the Toronto cattle byres a few days ago.

Large shipments of lime are made every week to the American market from Carleton, N. B., by rail. Some weeks the shipments amount to 1,400 barrels.

Speaking of lumber, the Ottawa Citizen says that things are looking busy around the Chaudiere. Some of the mills have commenced their season's work, and the buzz of the saws and the noise of the piling of lumber can now be heard.

The Royal Society of Canada opened its seventh annual session at Ottawa this forenoon in the railway committee rooms of the House of Commons. One of the features of this session will be the presentation of an original poem by Louis Frechette, of Quebec.

The contractors for the Halifax dry-dock, now approaching completion, claim that the dock works are free from city taxation not only for five years after completion, but also during construction. The whole dispute hangs on the punctuation of one sentence, as to whether a comma is rightly placed or not. As the document stands the city has the best chance of success should litigation be resorted to to settle the dispute.

The Late Mrs. Caroline Fletcher.

A SON'S TRIBUTE TO A MOTHER'S WORTH.

It is a sad thing for one to lose his mother, but doubly so when he feels that all he is, and all he has been able to accomplish, he owes to her. "Mother." Oh, the magic of that word! No love like a mother's love ever was known. It cannot be quenched. Her eyes may grow dim, but it will glow with a soft radiance that can never fade. Her cheeks may be furrowed by time; but they will be beautiful till the last. Her lips may be sunken, but they are the lips that kissed many a tear from your cheeks. Feeble and decrepit she may become, but she will go further and reach down lower for you than any else upon earth. You may be sent to the prison, but the bars will not keep her out. You may be doomed to the scaffold, but it will not be too high for her to reach. The world may turn against you, forsake and despise you, misinterpret your motives and misconstrue your actions, until all is as cold as death and as cheerless as the grave, but feeble as she is, she will clasp you in her arms, lay her hand on your head, and plant a kiss on your cheek, as evidence of her deathless and undying love. I had just such a mother, and now that she has gone to her eternal reward, I wish to lay this poor tribute at her feet.

I can well remember her heroic fortitude, her unselfish devotion, her prayers and her tears, as she was left, many years ago, with a large, but young and helpless family to care for. Yet amid all her anxieties and trials, she never complained; never neglected a duty; never failed to instill into the minds of her children the principles of truth, of sobriety, of virtue, of honesty, of justice to all mankind, and love for the God of all Good. Her disposition was sweet and supremely tender. To do good was her aim. To relieve suffering and mitigate sorrow and help the weak was her delight. Her many deeds of kindness will be long remembered by the poor. She possessed a religious nature; was a strong believer in the Gospel of Christ, but never paraded her piety before the world. Her religion consisted in being good, doing good, and loving those who were good. Whatever her peculiar views were, she never disliked others on account of theirs. Her heart was large enough to embrace the human race. I never knew her to have an unkind word with a neighbor. She never spoke ill of any one. She loved her own children with a tenderness that was touching, and was always willing to deny herself the very comforts of life, if they were only made happy.

One of the strongest desires of my life was that God would lengthen out her years. I wanted her to live until her hand began to tremble, for I wanted to see it letting go the things of time to clasp the golden harp. I wanted her to live until her voice began to quiver, for I wanted to see it changing into tones fit for the celestial choir. I wanted her to live until the hair dropped from her brow, for I wanted her to see the place prepared upon which God would place the everlasting crown. I wanted her to live until the late autumn of life, for to me there is no grander sight than to see an aged christian with blossomed hair and dimmed eyes, calmly awaiting the black ship of death, manned by friendly hands, that will carry her into the port of heaven to be young again, and forever. My prayer has been answered. Her years have been lengthened out, but alas, I could not be present to speak a word of comfort, or soothe her dying pillow in the agony of death. But I sometimes think that it is well, for I do not know that I could bear to see the sufferings of one who could not bear to witness them in another.

But her race is ended. The earthly chrysalis is broken, and the wings of the new being, illumined with heavenly light, flutter in the zephyrs of the eternal morning. Life's battle has been well fought. She came off "more than conqueror." There are some things her children can yet do. They can plant flowers on her grave, for flowers were made to bloom in just such places. They can imitate her virtues. They can practice her teachings. They can cherish her memory, and prepare to meet her in the "sweet bye and bye." Death gives liberty and room for more effective living. Death never conquers a person who dies in the right—to them the grave is but a door to a higher life.

"Our Father, to whose sleepless eyes the past and future stand,
An open page, like babes we cling to thy protecting hand,
Change, sorrow, death are naught to us if we may safely bow
Beneath the shadow of Thy throne a hundred years from now."

My Photograph.

The picture-man's accustomed hand
Arranged me with comely art,
And hid my principal defects
With judgment and dexterity.
He turned me right, he turned me left,
With wonderful rapidity,
Securing my inconstant head
To give it due solidity.

He placed a river at my back,
And trees and rocks adjacently
Adjusted with artistic touch,
And viewed the whole complacently.
"Just drop your chin!" I dropped it to
"The best of my ability!"
"But shut your mouth!" he added, which
I deemed an incivility.

Across the room, with dirty face,
A bric-a-bracket Psyche sat;
The artist backward jerked his thumb
And bade me keep an eye on that,
And eke to smile and also wink
With dignity and saunterly;
Whereat I smiled full solemnly
And winked with awful gravity.

'Twas difficult—but, now 'tis done,
With secret exultation do
I show to friends my photograph
And note their admiration, too.
"How beautiful!" they cry, nor know
Their honest praise is praise of me,
Till pressed to tell them who it is,
"Tis mine!" I say, triumphantly.

—Mrs. Geo. Archibald in Judge.

The Tannin Treatment of Phthisis.

Dr. E. Houze, of the Hospital St. Jean, Brussels, after having tried the tannin treatment on all his phthisical patients for the last year and eight months, states as the result of his observations that it gives excellent results in all stages of the disease, and especially in the condition where cavities exist. Indeed he has no hesitation in declaring that of all the different kinds of treatment for phthisis which he has tried this has given by far the most encouraging results. The dose he employs ordinarily is fifteen grains, which quantity is taken three times a day. It is, as a rule, well borne. Where this is not so, it is ordered to be taken with meals. After the first few days the expectoration and the sputa diminish, the cough decreases, and in many cases the appetite undergoes a marked improvement.

The majority of the patients suffered from some slight degree of constipation, though in some this feature was sufficiently marked to require treatment; while others, again, suffered from diarrhoea.

The character of the expectoration changed for the better, the sputa becoming white and frothy instead of green and firm. In some cases the diminution of the expectoration was followed by increased dryness of the cough, so that the patients complained that it fatigued them more. This was easily remedied by prescribing a few spoonfuls of sirup of codia. The physical signs underwent a remarkable change for the better, at least those depending on auscultation, moist rales giving place to dry rales, and large gurgling rales decreasing progressively until they gave place to mere blowing respiration. These changes were evidently due to the drying up of the cavities, in consequence of which the hectic present in many of the cases vanished, the patients increasing considerably in weight and gaining strength in a remarkable manner. The percussion signs were not found to undergo so marked a change as those dependent on auscultation, but even here some improvement could be detected. No bacteriological observations were made.

A Missing Man.

STRANGE REPORTS IN REGARD TO THE IRISH LAND LEAGUE.

A despatch from Chicago says:—Rumors are current in Irish Nationalist circles to-night that Dr. Cronin, who is missing, is in New York en route to London for the purpose of testifying before the Parnell commission. Cronin has always declared himself prepared to prove that not one tenth of the funds published in American papers as collected for the Land League ever went across the water. John Conking, saloon keeper, with whom he boarded, was interviewed to-night. When pressed he clearly indicated by his agitated manner that he knew more than he cared to say concerning the mystery. He would neither admit nor deny that Cronin received letters or cable despatches from England within the past few weeks, but contented himself with insisting that the man was dead. The mystery may not be cleared up inside of three months. Among other things he said several plots were formed to kill the missing man. Within a month he had been shadowed by a delegate from another city, sworn to kill him. A decree of death, he added, had gone out against another opponent of the Irish Land League controllers who resided in Philadelphia.

DIED.

At Hopewell, P. E. Island, on the 25th April, David McVean, Postmaster, in the 89th year of his age. He calmly and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus.

Fell asleep in Jesus, May 2nd, Albert Bruce, dearly beloved son of Richard Henry and Sarah Lydia Yeo, aged 6 years and 9 months.

Sleep on in thy beauty,
Thou sweet angel child,
By sorrow unlighted,
By sin undelivered.

Thou hast flown to thy rest,
From the wild sea of strife
To the home of the blest.
