THE DROWNING OF WISE. — The Pictou Standard has the following regarding the drowning of Thomas Wise, of Charlottown, reference to which has already appeared in THE EXAMINER: On Monday, 20th, the schooner Willie P., Capt. Thos. Wise, of Murray Harbor, P. E. I., was crossing from Charlottetown to Pictou. When near Pictou Island a squall struck her and Capt. Wise was thrown suddenly overboard. Everything was done to try and save the man, who could be seen swimming some distance astern, but the steering gear gave way and the poor fellow had to be abandoned to meet his fate. There was no chance to launch a boat, and the vessel was compelled to continue her way to Pictou in charge of a seaman named Hughes.

A GOOD WORD FOR SOURIS.

The St. John Sun's walking tourist, S. D. S., has a good word for Souris. He says:

"It is a spot of beauty which, if it were better known, would be a great place of resort for tourists. It is not so much the charm of the village itself, and of its beautiful beach and pleasing view of bay and strait and winding shore and distant headlands and islands in the dim distance, and on the horizon the suggestion of the boundless sea. The infinite variety of the neighborhood is the great attraction in this fair eastern resort. In a dozen directions where the tourist may drive or walk or sail, he will find as many kinds of pleasure There are streams which furnish trout and coves which abound with winged game. Mackerel, cod, and no end of other fish can be had in the salt water, and everywhere on sea and shore there are in fine weather fair prospects of land and water, and in the open a climate that cheers but not inebriates.

THE WOOD ISLANDS TRAGEDY.

Preliminary Examination Before Stipendiary-Magistrate Palmer.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 29.

Angus Blue (sworn)—This witness's evidence was merely a recital of a conversation with McNeill on the morning of the 24th, and is similar to the evidence given by Archd. Bell, except that McNeill said he had learnt that McMillan was going to die, and he was very sorry for what had happened. He meant to cripple them and would have been happy if that had happened instead of killing McMillan.

This was the last of the witnesses subpœnaed for Wednesday, and there are no other witnesses who were present when the shooting took place. The Attorney-General moved that the prisoner be sent up on a charge of manslaughter.

The Magistrate stated that he did not see how he could send up a prisoner on any other charge than that mentioned in the warrant, and thought it was his duty to send the prisoner up on a charge of murder.

Court adjourned until 11 o'clock on Thursday to examine witnesses for the defence.

THURSDAY, Aug 30.

The enquiry into this case was resumed this morning at 11 o'clock.

Mr. McLean, counsel for the prisoner, brought forward two witnesses for the defence.

Donald J. R. McMillan, (sworn)—I live near the prisoner and was at his house the day after the shooting. McNeill showed me the boards and the stave that the boys threw into his bedroom. McNeill told me that he stood in a corner by the window of his bedroom when he fired the shot. I saw the mark of the powder on the house. It made a course on the side of the house downward from the window at an angle of about 45. He must have just fired out of the window close to the house and the gun must have been pointed towards the ground. McNeill's sister when I called was able to crawl on her hands and knees from her bed to the sofa. She is very much crippled. It is a notorious fact that the two boys were in the habit of tormenting the old man. McNeill is a good neighbor and would never bother anyone if they did not bother him. I advised those two boys to give up tormenting McNeill two years ago. They used to tear down his fences and doors and throw them around.

John McIsaac, (sworn)—I am a next door neighbor to McNeill. He is a quiet man if left alone and not teased or imposed upon. I've heard these two boys with others teasing McNeill on several occasions. This sort of thing has been going on for the last eight years. I myself would not stand this for such a length of time. I advised Taylor once to leave him alone and several times I have spoken to crowds about teasing the old man. I saw the boards in the bedroom. I saw the powder mark on the side of the house; it pointed towards the ground, pretty straight down. The mark is very plain. I can see it two hundred yards away. I should judge the gun was fired downward from the window. McMillan must have been quite close to the window to be shot as he was. From where McNeill was standing, in the corner of his room, to avoid the boards that were thrown in, I should not think that he could have seen the man outside. McMillan must have been very close to the wall and to the gun or he would have been shot in the legs.

This closed the evidence for the defence.

Mr. McLean then asked, as the Magistrate had no option but to send the prisoner up to the Supreme Court, that he be sent up for manslaughter.

The Magistrate was of the opinion that the prisoner must be sent up charged with the same offence as mentioned in the warrant.

Mr. McLean quoted from the Criminal Code to show that the Magistrate had power to change the charge. He wished the prisoner to be sent up for manslaughter, as it would be more difficult to obtain bail if he were sent up charged with murder.

The Magistrate said that he had no power to do this. He thought that the Judges of the Supreme Court would grant bail after reading the depositions. He himself thought the evidence would not warrant a charge of murder. It evidently came under manslaughter. In making out the commitment he would have to follow the wording of the warrant, notwithstanding his own opinion. He thereupon sent up the prisoner to the Supreme Court on a charge of murder.

The trial will not come up in the Supreme Court until January next.
