Yesterday morning the delegates attended church services in the City and at two o'clock in the afternoon took a trip to Cavendish Beach and visited Green Gables. After having supper in Summerside, the party left for Borden and Tormentine where they boarded their eleven car special train for the trip home.

Three buses met the Ontario visitors at the boat at Borden and on the way to Charlottetown they made stops where they saw at first hand Island potatoes growing in the field.

In the afternoon they visited the A.R. testing station at the experimental station where keen interest was shown in this phase of the Island hog breeding program. Mr. Keith Clay was on hand to give information on the program.

IMPROMPTU ENTERTAINMENT Later in the afternoon the visitors retired to Birch Court where one of their party Mr. Roy Stewart put on some impromptu entertainment. The visitors then went to Parkdale Hall where the members of the Women's Institute served a delicious meal, compliments of the local Department of Agriculture.

Hon. Eugene Cullen, minister of Agriculture extended a welcome to the visitors to which Mr. L.C. Wallis replied. Mr. Dean Read gave a talk on the control of the turnip root maggot. Mr. S.C. Wright, Deputy Minister of Agriculture acted as chairman.

HARBOR CLOSING SCENES AT ROBINSON'S ISLAND

A narrow channel of rapid water, the flow of which reverses with the turn of the tide, is now all that separates Robinson's Island from the sandbar at Brackley Point. Last year stone filled cribwork was laid from the Brackley Point bar to Robinson's Island in preparation for the complete closing of this outlet from Rustico Bay. A government dredge is currently at work taking sand from the Robinson's Island Bar in bay and piping it across the outside of the cribwork. This sand, together with that caught by the cribwork, has already been used in much that was open water this time last year. This work is part of the project of building an oceanview highway linking all the Prince Edward Island National Park beaches from Dalvay to Cavendish. Photo by Margaret Mallett

The Annual District Convention of West Covehead, Stanhope, Suffolk, Marshfield, Dunstaffnage, Winslow North, Milcove, Covehead Road and York was held in York Hall, June 20th with a large attendance. Suffolk Institute was on the Reception. Rev. Mrs. J.M. Sproule presided. The hall was attractively decorated with cut flowers and a nice display of handicraft from the entertaining Institute. The meeting opened by singing "The Maple Leaf Forever," followed by "The Club Womens Collect" in unison. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Dewar Swan of West Covehead very graciously replied. Roll call was followed by a joint report of our work for past year given by Mrs. Cecil Sletson, Marshfield, same being adopted. The secretary, Mrs. Herry Lewis, read the 1955 Convention Minutes, which were also adopted. West Covehead invited the Convention to meet with them in 1957. Mrs. Ernest Foster gave a brief report on the "Scholarship Fund." The same committee as last year are to re-arrange amounts to be paid by each Institute. This is to be done according to members. Mrs. Manning in her usual pleasing manner and assisted by Miss Heather Coles gave a demonstration "Odds and Ends" all these items being very useful and worthwhile yet inexpensive. Mr. Parker, our guest speaker, gave their demonstration, his subject being "Rural Education and its Future." During this

TAKE YOUR BIBLE ALONG FOR QUIET HOLIDAY READING. "Take your Bible with you" was a bit of advice given by a young woman to one starting on a holiday. "Till I come give attendance to reading" was a word written by St. Paul to a youthful friend and fellow-worker, and the New Standard Version suggests that this too meant the reading of Scripture. One of the pleasures we expect from a holiday is the chance it offers for quiet reading. But what to read? Is often hard to answer. A Canadian humorist describes the shelf of books he took with him on a holiday at Lake Muldrew, not one of which he opened as he tried to adjust himself to that charming spot. But if it is impossible to master Plato or Browning in the brief breathing spell allowed to many of us, it is possible to read something that will be an inspiration for the busy days ahead. A holiday is no time to stuff your mind with trash. "Oh! Anything you've got!" a young woman on a train said in a tired voice to the "newbie" when he came along with magazines and a book or two. She would have resented it didn't matter what she poured into her mind so long as she was diverted. But the nourishment of the mind is as necessary for health and happiness as the feeding of the body. EVERY DAY By all means, take your Bible along and read it every day. Why not make your holiday an opportunity to familiarize yourself with some book of the New Testament—for instance the Epistle to the Romans, by St. Paul, or the Gospel of Luke by St. Paul's physician and friend. You will need to read them over and over and over, and you will find more that is new on the third or fourth reading than on the first. There is nothing finer in all literature than chapters 8 and 12 of Romans except Christ's doctrine of love without limit in Matthew 5 or His parables of the lost sheep, the lost coin and the lost son in Luke 15. Was it not Renan who called St. Luke's Gospel "the most beautiful book in the world"? And did not Colridge call Romans the profoundest book in existence? If these are too big, take a look at the heights and depths of that lit the letter to the Philippians or at the simplicity of St. Mark's account of Jesus ministry. But never a cursory glance in any case: the Bible requires close and persistent attention. BROWNING BECKONS Then there is a book somewhere on your shelves that you have looked at for years and have never had time to read. For example, I have never given Alexander Pope a chance at my mind. Again and again I have peeked into the beautiful volume of his poems given me by a friend some time ago, but have never really read through one of his writings. I am hoping to let him try his hand on me this summer. Robert Browning is beckoning again, but I am too indolent to tackle Paracelsus or Sordello for summer entertainment. Stratford is calling us back to Shakespeare.

Annual Memorial Service Held At New London

A great congregation gathered about the historic Geddie Memorial Church at New London on Sunday afternoon, July 8th, for the purpose of again honoring the heroic dead of two world wars. Two monuments stand on this peaceful spot overlooking beautiful New London Bay which was never lovelier as bright sunlight and crystal clear air focused every detail of blue water, white sandhills and green shoreline. The minister pointed out that God is close to us in our moments of ecstasy, as when we experience one of life's great events. When life is dark with tragedy God also draws near, even when that darkness has come upon us through our own deliberate actions. God inhabits both our ecstasies and our remorse. There is no place where we can go from the attention of God. In life's chosen adventures God goes along. The speaker said that the world has become a small place but in the time of the psalmist, the uttermost parts of the sea were truly afar off. However far, God will never leave us alien in this world. The Kensington United Church Choir, under the direction of Rev. J.M. Murray, organist, rendered special anthems and led in the congregational singing. Rev. L.D. Bartlett of the Presbyterian Church conducted the service and was assisted by Canon J.T. Ibbot of Charlottetown, Anglican, and Rev. H.S. Haslam of the United Church. Prayer was offered by Rev. G.W. Irvine of Glen-

NEWSY NOTES

By J. A. Clark, D.Sc.

TURNIP ROOT MAGGOTS Montague and Murray River, Iona and other similar areas. In clay loam soils he found that the first maggot attack started late in July or early in August, and that there was only one complete brood of maggots during the entire season. Farmers should contact Mr. D. C. Read at the Science Service, Experimental Farm, Charlottetown, re the time when the maggots will probably attack their area, and the best treatment to lessen the injury from this pest. There are certain parasites that kill the root maggot flies, eggs and larvae. Work to increase these in under way. Dry weather and natural enemies will reduce and sometimes almost eliminate injury by the maggots. It has been observed that late planting of swede turnips in light soil areas has resulted in lighter maggot infestations; and that early planting of turnips in the heavier soil areas has also resulted in crops with less injury from turnip maggots. In some of the Western Province, experimental work and remedial methods have resulted in adequate control of maggots attacking swede turnips. In Prince Edward Island, however, standard methods and even the newer insecticides have been ineffective in controlling the pest. Mr. Read in his paper gave details re spraying with DDT, and other methods of control. He has designed a special machine for the precision placement of soil treatment at the time of seeding the swede turnips, with heptachlor or aldrin in a 5-inch band 1 1/2 inches below the turnip seed in a ridged seeding drill. Hand-operated machines, applying 5 pounds of insecticide per acre, have been used by many farmers throughout the province. This has given excellent control of root maggots in all types of soil. GIVEN TEMPERANCE POST OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Edmund M. Peterson has been elected executive secretary of the Canada Temperance Society, it was announced Saturday. He succeeds John M. Hnatyshyn, who resigned. The society, sponsored by the Seventh Day Adventists Church in Canada, has branches throughout the country.
