

Stay-At-Home Ducks Are Aided

STONEWALL, Man. (CP) — About 1,000 ducks in this district can vouch for the old adage "two wrongs don't make a right."
The first wrong was the ducks did not go south with the others last fall. Then unseasonable spring weather melted snow covering fields in this district which later turned into ice.
The ducks who had survived the winter by scratching through the snow covering grain fields found themselves faced with a problem they couldn't solve.
However, Ducks Unlimited and the Stonewall Fish and Game Association stepped in. Bulldozers were obtained and used to remove the ice. Then bags of grain and grit were dropped from an association member's plane over the cleared area.
Additional grain has been stored by the association in case weather problems again threaten the ducks.

FORMER GLORY Tibet as a military power in the 7th to 9th centuries held sway over areas within China and India.

The bidding:

Opening lead—seven of clubs. It is with great pleasure that I publish the accompanying hand which was sent to me by Colonel C. B. Ryerson, who is stationed somewhere abroad, as indicated by his APO address.

The colonel is in the engineering corps, and if I am to judge his skill and that of his bridge cronies by the perfect defense the East-West pair put up in this hand, I will be glad to have them on our side for defensive purposes if and when they do battle with more than aces and kings.

The Army, wherever it is stationed, publishes a newspaper called Stars and Stripes, in which this column regularly appears, and I presume I owe it to this circumstance that I was the recipient of this interesting hand.

The bidding was short and snappy as might be expected. West made the inspired opening lead of the singleton club rather than the "take a look" lead of the king of spades.

Declarer played the jack of clubs from dummy and East took the trick with the ace. After giving mature reflection to what to return, asti arrived at the conclusion that there was no hope to beat the hand unless the club lead was a singleton.

Accordingly, he returned a club, and his judgment was vindicated when West trumped it.

It was now West's turn to consider the prospect of getting two more tricks, if the contract was to be beaten. It did not appear likely to him that declarer could have two losing spades because if such were the case East would have to have a singleton spade, and would very likely have retracted spades rather than a club.

West therefore led the deuce of spades, dummy played low, East played the eight and, much to his astonishment, it held the trick. When he had sufficiently recovered from the shock East returned another club. West ruffed it, South mumbled something in his beard and the contract was defeated one trick.

—Old Mother Nature.

Tubby Bear was a very small bear. He was very small indeed, but he was called Tubby. He was one of Mother Bear's triplets born under a great pile of brush in the most lonesome part of the Green Forest. He was a roly-poly little cub, and that is why he was called Tubby. He had a brother who was just as roly-poly and he was called Chubby. They were very like these two little cubs. They had a sister who shared their birthday, but she wasn't roly-poly. She was smaller and she had a brown coat, while their coats were black. She was called Cubby Bear.

One morning Tubby Bear came out before his brother and sister were really wide awake. Just as he did so something fell from high up in that tall tree. It was a bit of meat. Tubby picked it up and ate it. It made him hungrier. He looked up in that tall tree, but he couldn't see where that bit of meat had come from. Still he was sure it had come out of that tree.

He wondered if he could climb up. He looked to see if anyone was watching him, but nobody was. He stood up on his stout little hind legs and reached up as far as he could with his forelegs. He dug his sharp little claws into the bark and pulled himself up a little. At the same time he dug his claws on his hind feet into the bark. It made him feel more secure. He tried pulling himself up a little higher and a little higher. Soon he had reached the lowest branch of that tall tree. He crawled little by little, but he was afraid to go on that big branch and looked up. Just then, something happened that gave him a bad fright. A great bird with fierce yellow eyes swooped at him and startled him so that he lost his hold. A great wing hit him and down he fell. Tubby landed at the foot of the tree with a thump just as Chubby Bear came out.

"What did you do that for?" asked Chubby Bear.

Huge Tidal Waves Follow 'Quake In The Aleutians

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The nervous northeastern rim of the Pacific continued to tremble Sunday night in the wake of Saturday's mighty earthquake in the Aleutian Islands.

The restless earth that sent tidal waves crashing into villages in Hawaii and Japan rumbled again Sunday at 7:20:23 p.m. PAST and the University of California seismograph at Berkeley was still registering the shock 2½ hours later.

Research assistant John Denoyer estimated its Richter reading at seven, compared with eight for the great first tremor Saturday morning. Denoyer said the new quake, apparently a vigorous aftershock, appeared again to be in the Aleutians.

Meanwhile the U.S. coast and geodetic survey office in Honolulu reported that Mount Vesuvius slammed over the beaches Saturday along northern shores of the island, 154 people were left homeless in two villages on Kauai while 4,000 others were isolated by washed out bridges. Damage estimates ranged up to $2,000,000. No direct loss of life was reported because of early warnings, but Paul O. Beam, a veteran newspaper man, and Sarah Park, Honolulu Star-Bulletin reporter, were killed in the crash of a plane photographing the waves.

Governor Samuel King of Hawaii said he was waiting full damage reports before asking for federal aid, but had declared a 10-mile coastal stretch on Kauai a disaster area and placed Maj. Gen. F. W. McKinney, territorial civil defence director, in charge of disaster relief.

Hours after the alert had ended in Hawaii, nine-foot waves crashed into fishing villages on Hokkaido, northernmost of the main Japanese islands. Police reported one house washed away with others wrecked and more than 50 flooded.

A 3½-foot wave that rolled belatedly into San Diego bay late Saturday night: sank an 85-foot boat slip from its moorings and caused a damage estimated at $5,000. The wave piled into the bay at an estimated 20½ miles an hour.
