Popular City Tailor G.C. Cudmore Dies

One of the city's last old-time tailors, and one of the best-liked in the business, George C. Cudmore, 99 Elm Avenue, died in hospital Wednesday.

Born in Winsloe, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cudmore, he moved with his family to the city when he was 10 years old. After attending West Kent School he started to learn the tailoring trade with the late John T. MacKenzie 55 years ago and on finishing his time opened his own tailoring and repair shop on Great George Street.

Later Mr. Cudmore moved his establishment a few doors north on the same block and established one of the Island's earliest dry cleaning plants. Shortly afterwards he retired, selling the business to his son Wendall who now shares it with his brother Eric.

Unaccustomed to a life of ease the late Mr. Cudmore returned to the business scene and opened the Master Cleaners plant on Fitzroy Street which he operated for a time before selling it and again retiring from business. However, he once again returned to join his two sons in their new establishment on Kent Street and stayed until ill health forced him to quit earlier this year.

poses to add the three classes for which the various breed associations will make the prize money available.

Their right to do so was challenged by several breeders but the money was voted, and clarification will be sought later, it was decided.

No championships are provided for in the Canada department of agriculture plan, but a male championship and reserve, and a female championship and reserve is being provided, Allison Profit, exhibition president, told the Holstein breeders.

INTERESTING SIDELIGHT
An interesting sidelight developed when R.C. Parent, director experimental farm, told the black and white breeders they ranked behind at least several other dairy breeds in the fact their aggregate of breed class averages were only 98 in milk—they are 103 in fat. "The Ayrshires and the Shorthorns are both better and I believe the Guernseys are too," he said.

The reference was to production given by Maritime Holstein fieldman, E.P. (Ernie) Jarvis, who submitted a typewritten report with extensive information.

But National President Row said later the Holsteins have a much better average production in the nation. Their 115.9 pounds milk Mr. Rowe said, is far ahead of the average production of other dairy breeds, so the Holstein men have a much higher production goal to aim at, he rebutted.

The national Holstein president said he wasn't at all happy about the selection of Holstein cattle in Ontario last year for Island farmers. He did not go into details but suggested he had tried to suggest a better method of selection and that he hoped such would be done if the province was buying more cattle from his province in future.

TOP PRODUCERS
Mr. Jarvis revealed that Millview Royal Beauty owned by Charles Milligan, Coleman was the Island's highest individual producer among ROP records reported in 1964 with 19,313 pounds milk, 666 pounds butterfat for breed class averages of 178%.

Roland Buntain of Rustico topped all herds of 20 cows or less with an average of 133 breed class average. For herds of 20 records or more the department of agriculture, Charlottetown showed the way with 108 B.C.A. Of the four major dairy breeds, Mr. Jarvis said, "your average Holstein cow, last year, out-produced the other breeds by 1,584 pounds milk, for an average production, on every Holstein cow and heifer that finished 305-day records, of 10,309 pounds milk, and 403 pounds fat, with an average test of 3.78 per cent for a B.C.A. of 98 milk, 108 fat, on 528 records in 51 herds, which is roughly 19 per cent of the members on ROP tests.

TOO WIDE RANGE
J. Lincoln Dewar observed that in his opinion there is much too wide a quality range in cattle classified as good plus.

"They range from cattle that are pretty desirable to those you wouldn't want around your place," he said. Good plus cows range from a conformation score of 80 to 84 points.

The top end of the good plus cows could be upgraded, into very good—85 to 89 points—and those at the lower end could go into good," he said and this grouping ranges from 75 to 79 points.

Ira Lewis, York; Clayton Stetson, O'Leary and Urban MacKinnon, St. Georges were added as new directors.

Ira Lewis later was named president and Lincoln Dewar, New Perth, vice-president. Scott MacArthur of Union Road is secretary.

S.C. Wright, deputy minister of agriculture was guest speaker at a noon luncheon. Retiring president John Thompson presided.

Elaine Bryenton of Brackley, the dairy princess, was introduced to the meeting by Daniel MacPherson of Oyster Bed Bridge, president of the Dairyman's Association.

The luncheon, served by the Women's Institute of Parkdale, was held at Birch Court.

Straight Answers Needed To Question Of Alcoholism

Approximately 180 delegates from Allied Youth Posts all over the province attended the Fourth Provincial Youth Conference held at the Confederation Center last evening.

Main speaker for the evening was Angus M. MacFarlane, director of physical education and athletics at Mount Allison University, who spoke on the alcohol problems faced by the youth of today.

Mr. MacFarlane said "we sometimes make the serious error of running seminars and study groups in which we try desperately to pass off facts and information to young people so that they might be better informed." Youth today is more informed than it has ever been. Young people are sometimes astounded by the ignorance of older people who are trying to lead them, he explained.

"Young people are more intelligent, healthier and more informed than my own generation was," he said, "and I have great fear that unless my generation works very hard, youth will pass us by without us having given them the benefit of our experiences."

He went on to say that youth wants to be told right from wrong. Instead, time and time again, they are presented with a series of facts and told to make up their own mind intelligently.

"Let us not say that drinking is sinful, said Mr. MacFarlane, but let us simply point out that alcohol is a problem because of the fact that we have the right to decide to drink or not to drink."

Those who have indulged in drinking for any length of time admit that mentally they are not as sharp. There is no question about the physical effects; there is no question about the mental effects. Yet alcohol is a problem, he said.

Alcohol is just an example of many of the unanswered problems facing our young people today. Young people must enjoy themselves, but they must set their sights high, he said.

"It is not so important that we prepare them for the future, but it is more important that young people are made to realize that they must be dedicated to contribute to life and society in a fashion which will give adequate leadership to those who will follow them," Mr. MacFarlane said.
