Newest Diabetic Drug Is Praised

NEW YORK (CP)—Chlorpropamide, an oral drug for treating diabetes, has received favorable evaluation from experts meeting in New York.

The assessment of chlorpropamide, known also by the trade name Diabinese, was made at a conference sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences and Charles Pfizer and Company, the firm that developed the compound.

The drug was assessed as being at least twice as potent as any other substitute for insulin available. However, it was said to be limited in its effectiveness to generally to adult diabetics whose insulin requirements usually are under 20 units daily.

Juvenile diabetics and patients requiring large daily intravenous injections of insulin are not usually helped by the oral drugs, it was noted.

BEST IS SPEAKER
Dr. Charles H. Best, director of the Best Institute in Toronto and co-discoverer of insulin in 1922 with the late Dr. Frederick G. Banting, summarized the advantages of Diabinese.

Joining in evaluating the drug's potential and known qualities in the three-day conference which ended Saturday were experts from Europe, South America, the Middle East and the Far East.

The drug is one of the sulfonylurea compounds developed by Pfizer and is closely related to tolbutamide, discovered in Germany in 1954 and marketed in the U.S. under the name of Orinase.

Dr. Best, in an interview, said he found that chlorpropamide stimulated some extra liberation of insulin, which is furnished by the pancreas. Insulin lowers the amount of sugar in the blood, which the body has failed to metabolize. The disease is characterized by the body's inability to assimilate carbohydrates and sugar.

Chlorpropamide was termed apparently effective on middle-aged and elderly diabetics who otherwise would receive relatively small doses of insulin. Dr. Best foresaw the eventual development of a successful oral insulin.

Dulles Speaks Strongly In Opposition To Appeasement

BOSTON (AP)—State Secretary Dulles said Saturday night any U. S. surrender to Communist threats in the Formosa Strait would weaken the free world defenses in Western Europe.

Dulles said Communist China, backed by Russia, is trying to "expel the United States from Formosa" and that this is a test of U.S. determination.

"If the United States should give in to that arrogant demand in Asia, the consequences would be felt in Western Europe," Dulles said in a speech prepared for a meeting of the Atlantic Treaty Association.

His speech dealt in part with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's efforts to operate effectively and in part with the Far East crisis.

MUST KEEP UNITY
Dulles said ways must be found to preserve the Atlantic Pact's unity because "communism gains whenever there are differences."

"We know that hostilities anywhere could spread and quickly affect the (NATO) treaty area."

Relating this to Red China's bombardment and threats to invade Nationalist-held islands in the Formosa Strait, he said:

"It is quite true that that effort at destruction is now concentrated at a point geographically on the other side of the world and at a point where the Communists judge surrender is most likely."

"But nonetheless the principles at stake there are the principles upon which NATO rests. If they are not valid and not sustained in Asia, it cannot be confidently assumed that they are valid and will be sustained in Europe."

SEEKS SUPPORT
Dulles' linking of the fortunes of NATO with the situation in the Far East seemed clearly designed to win more support for U.S. policy in the Formosa Strait, which generally has received no more than lukewarm backing from this country's European allies.

The secretary said he was confident the NATO governments understood U.S. determination to reject what he called appeasement of Red China and stand firm against Communist seizure by force of Nationalist territory.

Permitting that to happen, he said, would undermine everywhere the principle of peaceful settlement of disputes.

French In Canada Vote De Gaulle

OTTAWA (CP)—A virtually unanimous endorsement of Premier de Gaulle's constitutional proposals appeared probable Sunday night in French referendum votes cast in Canada.

The embassy reported Sunday night that with two-thirds of the ballots in the total favoring the proposals was 6,830 as against 33 contrary ballots.

There remained about 3,600 votes to come from Montreal—about half the anticipated total from that city.

An embassy official said at the rate of vote totals received so far from consul offices in Canada, it seems about 12,000 French nationals were eligible to vote, a lower number than previously estimated.

Votes were cast at Halifax, Montreal, Quebec City, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. The totals were messaged here for addition.
