A Good Wife.—The following old recipe for the choice of a wife seems a very good one:

"As much of beauty as preserves affection,

Of modest diffidence as claims protection,

A temper led by reason and reflection,

And every passion kept in due subjection,

Just faults enough to keep her from perfection;

Find this my friend and then make your selection."

A young man asked an old man for his daughter in marriage. The answer was "Go into the orchard and bring in a number of apples. Give me one-half of the whole number, and the mother half of the balance and half of an apple over, and to the daughter one-half of the remainder and half an apple, and have one left for yourself, without cutting an apple, and then if she is willing, you can have her." He solved his question. How many did he bring?

CURIOSITY OF JUSTICE.—The other day, at the Criminal Court, a prisoner was upon his trial, and at the conclusion of it he was told the jury had found him guilty. "Exactly," replied the culprit, "that is just my conviction."

An Irishman being asked what he came to America for, said, "Is't what I came here for, you mane? Arrah, by the powers! you may be sure that it wasn't for want, for I had plenty of that at home."

A gentleman, who, irritated at some misconduct of his servant, said, "John, either you or I must quit this house."

"Very well, sir," said John, "where will your honor go to?"

Jerrold says, that young boys who marry old maids, "gather in the spring of life, the golden fruits of autumn."

A very nice sentiment, but not at all likely to take.

There is an endless variety of opinion on the subject of beauty, but there is a universal belief that the elephant's upper lip is altogether too long for good looks.

"Although I never drink, I think I'm 'taking a drop' now," as the temperance man said when he fell out of a third story window.

"I know by a little what a great deaf means," as the gander said when he saw the tip of a foxe's tail sticking out of a hollow tree.

An editor out West says, if "time is money," he is willing to exchange a little for "hard."

Why is an errand-boy like an old horse put up at auction? Because he'll fetch.

Why are persons born blind unfit to be carpenters? Because they never saw.

We wonder if anybody ever picked up a tear that was dropped?

"Gentlemen," said a 'avern keeper to his guests at midnight, "I don't know whether you have talked enough or not, but as for myself I am going to shut up."

"What can a man do, asked a green 'un, when a sheriff is coming up to him with a writ in his hand?"

"Apply the remedy," said another.

"Apply the remedy! What remedy?"

"Heeling remedy."

"My dear," said an anxious matron to her daughter, "it's very wrong for young people to be throwing kisses to each other."—"Why so, mamma? I'm sure they don't hurt, even if they did hit."

"Do you chew tobacco?" asked a lady, hesitating to sit down by a gentleman in a car. "No, ma'am, I don't," he replied; "but guess I can get you a chew, if you want one."

All the young men of Chicago are said to be classified according to their skill as velocipedists into the "timid toddlers," the "wary warblers," the "go-it-gracefuls," and the "fancy few."

Poverty is often the home of greatness.

Deserve success and it will come.

No truly great man ever thought himself so.

Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up.

Labor, with keen eye and strong will, will turn up something.

A hundred years of wrong do not make an hour of right.

Most of a fisherman's income may be classed under the head of net gains.

All good principles must stagnate without mental activity.

What grows bigger the more you contract it? Debt.

What is that which when thrown out, may be caught without hands?—A hint.

When may a man's pocket be empty and yet have something in it? When it has a hole in it.

A Yankee captain was caught in the jaws of a whale, but was finally rescued, badly wounded; on being asked what he thought while in that situation he replied: "I thought he would make about forty barrels."

A darkey gives the following reason why the colored race is superior to the white race. He reasons thusly; "That all men are made of clay, and like the meerschaum pipe, they are more valuable when highly colored."

"You Won't be Missed.—It is vain to stick your finger in the water, and pulling it out, look for a hole; and equally vain to suppose that, however large a space you occupy, the world will miss you when you die."

"I wish I could prevail on my neighbor Quinder to keep the Sabbath," said good old Mister Jones. "I'll tell you how to do it," exclaimed young Smith, "get some one to lend it to him, and I'll be bound he'll keep it. He was never known to return anything he had borrow."

Some one blamed Dr. Marsh for changing his mind. "Well," said he, "that is the difference between a man and a jackass; the jackass can't change his mind, and the man can—it's a human privilege."

Agriculture.

The Farmer's Door Yard.

"I do wish you would take hold today and clear up that old pile of rubbish out there," says the farmer's wife to her husband, as the two stand in the doorway contemplating the miscellaneous mass of old lumber, tools and vehicles in the yard.

"Can't stop now," is the answer.

"There is some brush waiting in the pasture."—"So shouldering his axe he starts for the pasture lot, leaving his wife still gazing with dissatisfied air the spectacle before her, and vainly wishing that she had a man's strength so that she could do the work herself, and fix up things around the house."

Having made all things neat and tidy in the house, she does not relish the looks out of doors.

But she fails to interest her husband in the matter, for it is so handy to have a place in the yard where he could throw down boards, slabs and old timbers, to lie until they are used. It is so much easier to trip up that old sleigh against the shed than to put it away under cover.

It is so little trouble to leave the harrow, the cultivator, the hay-rack, at the door where they can be easily found the next time they are wanted. He will clear up things sometime, he says; so he continually postpones the work of putting in order until such a time as he shall have nothing else to do, and as a natural consequence it is never done.

Finally, he becomes so accustomed to the sight of rubbish, that it ceases to look repulsive, and he takes it as a matter of course that the farmer's yard is the best place for all the old rubbish that accumulates about the premises.

There are a few things that the farmer can do in a short space of time which will be so gratifying to his faithful wife, as a little extra effort to keep things in order about the house.

Besides this, it will do more than please her; it will benefit himself. It will develop a taste for neatness and regularity, a regard for appearances, carefulness in the details of all the farm management, which will add to the attractiveness of the place, and consequently to its market value.
