

Eclipse Viewing Peril Emphasized

Warnings regarding the peril of viewing Saturday's partial eclipse of the sun with naked or inadequate eye protection were issued yesterday by the department of public health.

Health Minister Hubert B. McNell advised that children particularly parents and children to watch the show on television. He said in a news release, "The eclipse should not be viewed through any material which does not remove the invisible ultra violet and infra red rays as well as most of the visible light."

"As it is not possible to tell the efficiency of these various devices without laboratory testing, the advice of the department of health is to watch the eclipse on television."

Dr. McNell added "as the television program will be projected in an area of total eclipse, the picture will be a better one than the partial eclipse which will occur in our area."

The eclipse will be seen here beginning at 5:42 p.m. It will see 92 per cent of the sun's surface blacked out.

"Any person", Dr. McNell warned, "particularly children, looking at the eclipse for even a few seconds without eye protection, or through an inadequate viewing device, may suffer permanent damage to their sight."

CANADA

Mr. Gordon's speech contained a hint that Canada may seek changes in the Kennedy tax proposal to lessen its impact on Canada's U.S. Ambassador Walton Butterworth listened from a Commons gallery during part of his speech.

NEED INFLOW

The finance minister urged Canada's need for continued inflows of U.S. capital to offset large surpluses earned by U.S. current transactions with Canada in trade and other fields.

It was Canada's failure to raise U.S. capital last year, he said, that led to so many undesirable consequences. Among these were the current transactions which have been even more unpopular in the U.S. than in Canada.

Mr. Gordon said that the United States administration would be trying to incur a reputation as a "creditor nation" if it refused to help solve the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit should be directed against major surplus countries such as Canada, Italy, and West Germany.

Canada had run big annual deficits with the U.S. American capital flowing into Canada was a credit to the U.S. "Under these conditions, the United States would surely like to cut down their capital exports to this country."

Mr. Gordon noted that External Affairs Minister Martin had already held talks with Ambassador Butterworth.

Mr. Gordon said it will be "weeks, even months" before U.S. congressional action can be expected on the Kennedy proposal.

Canada there would be ample opportunity to discuss with the U.S. government the possible effects of the Kennedy proposal.

He counselled "a positive and co-operative" approach to the problem.

As Mr. Gordon spoke, representatives of the Kennedy proposal continued to be felt in financial and stock markets.

The Canadian dollar's exchange value dropped further below its pegged rate of 92 1/2 cents to 91 1/2 cents.

The eight-man RCMP detachment here has been increased to include extra men for patrol duty.

Mayor Fagan said the police are doing the best possible. Men from the naval station are staying on call at the volunteer fire brigade here when off duty, and a number of civilians are doing the same thing.

"Many men haven't slept all week," said Mr. Fagan.

Thursday night about 100 men patrolled the town. They caught a fire in the town dump before it could reach serious proportions.

"The pressure is tremendous," said Jack Healey, who operates a grocery store. "The people are doing all they can. We've got to catch them."

At the public closing Friday evening the boys and girls occupied the front pews and a group of girls formed the choir. The pianist was Mrs. Leslie Hardy.

The theme of the school was "Living for Jesus." Following opening worship the pupils led in the singing of a number of selections they had learned during the week.

In turn each class answered questions on the lessons and recited scripture they had memorized. Certificates were presented to all who had attended.

Mrs. Jardine expressed appreciation to the girls who contributed to the success of the school and also to L. L. Dennis who provided a treat for the pupils.

The handbook on display was exceptionally well done.

On Saturday afternoon a picnic held at Montrose was greatly enjoyed.

Arrangement was in the church cemetery.

A HIGH RISE'S AHEAD OF HIM

Joseph M. Walker, space test pilot, prepares to take off yesterday on a flight in the X15 rocket plane which unexpectedly carried him to a new altitude record of approximately 330,000 feet. It beat the old mark of 314,700 feet set a year ago by Air Force Maj. Joseph accusing them of wanting to carry forward their revolutionary fervor at the risk of a nuclear war with the U.S.

He scoffed at them for doubting his old thesis that the socialist system built both East and West of the Iron Curtain at highways and ports where presence might spot any troop movements for a surprise attack.

Khrushchev made clear in his 30-minute speech that he wanted a non-aggression pact or something close to it to come out of the present negotiations. State undersecretary W. Averell Harriman, chairman of the U.S. delegation, has repeatedly said he is here to negotiate a test ban, though he is irascibly disinclined to do so.

Just as before, Khrushchev appeared to leave it somewhat open as to whether the nuclear test ban had to be coupled with a non-aggression pact before it would approve it.

But he claimed a non-aggression pact, together with agreement to prevent surprise attack, would be most acceptable to him and "would be received with great satisfaction by world public opinion."

He said it was clear that the negotiations already have indicated a test ban covering nuclear explosions in the air, under water and in space can be achieved.

Here is what he proposed:

1. The test ban covering all nuclear explosions except underground, which he said is not feasible now.
2. A non-aggression pact between the Russian Federation, the U.S. and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.
3. A settlement of the Berlin problem.
4. A settlement of the Berlin problem.

Development Program Is Launched In Tignish

TIGNISH — A resources development program for the Tignish Regional High School auditorium Thursday evening.

John Gavin acted as chairman, and introduced Hartwell Daley, director of research and R. E. D. Sangster, marketing director for P.E.I. and fieldman for the West Prince area, Gordon Ripley.

Mr. Daley said, the entire development program rests with the people who live in the area, as they know what needs to be done and told how successful this course has proven in other communities.

Mr. Sangster and Mr. Ripley both offered their assistance to help solve any problems that may arise. Mr. Sangster gave an example of many things that could be done to develop the Tignish area, among them were the growing of strawberries, and carrots. He urged the people to work hard in hand and develop the area.

"If this program has not done something for you one year from now, it is your own fault," he said. A film of the southern part of the United States in 1946 on community development was shown during the evening.

Thirty-two enrolled at the meeting for the study course and 100 persons who are interested in community co-operation may enroll by contacting the chairman, John Gavin at his home in Tignish.

strayed or damaged.

The latest to be hit was an RCMP radio repeater station, a link in the police communications system between St. John's, about 75 miles from here, and the south coast. But it is Penikese.

The shack, beside a 30-foot radio tower, was damaged on one side by the flames.

Firesmen from here and the U.S. naval station at Argentina answered the call, turned in by a woman who refused to give her name. At the same time Mayor Don Fagan of Freshwater received a call saying "you look out your window."

The eight-man RCMP detachment here has been increased to include extra men for patrol duty.

Mayor Fagan said the police are doing the best possible. Men from the naval station are staying on call at the volunteer fire brigade here when off duty, and a number of civilians are doing the same thing.
