

THE SMELL OF SPRUCE.

The children's Christmas tree, long saved, and now
Dropped bit by bit upon the blazing fire,
Sheds through the room, even as the flames
Leap higher,
A smell of pitch that bids me think of how,
Long years ago, beneath the sheltering brow
Of that gray hill I knew, I'd seek a spot
Where wind or sun or storm might enter not—
So dense the foliage it would but allow
The light of day dimly to penetrate.
And in the midday twilight of the knoll,
Hemmed in by spruce trees, young and tall
and straight,
There dwelt, it seemed, the woodland's healing whole.
Its gloom, its breath, its odors—missed of late—
Its peace, its silence and its very soul.
—J. L. Heaton in "The Quilting Bee."

OUR WELCOME TO KOSSUTH.

Tremendous Ovation to the Patriot as He Rode Up Broadway, New York.

"The military parade and public demonstration given in honor of Kossuth, the Hungarian exile, upon the occasion of his visit to New York in 1851 was the finest ever seen in that city," writes Parke Godwin, who witnessed the memorable demonstration and very graphically recalls it in "The Ladies' Home Journal." Broadway was a bewildering sight, densely packed with enthusiastic, cheering crowds. The houses were literally buried by flags, bunting, greens and other decorations. About the city hall the colors of Hungary floated in profusion, always flanked by the American flag.

At the magnificent and inspiring spectacle Kossuth was evidently amazed. "It was more than he expected, and as he calmly viewed the scene at Broadway and Ann street he was startled by the thunderous shout of welcome from admirers that had gathered at the Astor House. He looked up and saw every man in the windows and on the porch cheering and waving his hat in a frenzy of enthusiasm and the women saluting him with equal fervor. Kossuth gracefully bowed, not once, but twice, three, a dozen times. During this recognition the scene grew in enthusiasm until the effect was almost bewildering. It seemed as if the populace had gone mad. Again and again did Kossuth rise and bow, until finally he stood up in his carriage, hat in hand radiantly smiling.

But the scene did not end here. The procession was temporarily halted by the immense crowd. The passage of the carriages was almost impossible. Again loud huzzas for Kossuth were thundered forth by 30,000 persons of all classes and ages, and once more did Kossuth rise and stand in his carriage. The Hungarian aids, who followed immediately after Kossuth's carriage, came in for their share of applause. They, too, were cheered heartily. They returned the compliment by waving their Hungarian banner. Again 30,000 voices were raised in honor of the great hussar, and again the hussar flag was lowered. It is impossible to adequately describe the scene that followed. Those who witnessed it remember it and will recall it as the most remarkable event of its kind in the history of our country."
