

Montreal French Group Wins Top Drama Award

By DON HANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
EDMONTON (CP) — A four-penny theatre group rich in talent and originality scarcely had taken its curtain call Saturday night before its rollicking French-language farce was named winner of the 1957 Dominion Drama Festival.

Making the choice from a week's competition among eight groups from six provinces, adjudicator Robert Speaight spared no praise for the Theatre de Quat' Sons from Montreal and also named its "ravishing, excellent performance of La Tour Eiffel Qui Tue" as best visual presentation in the festival.

It thus won the top trophy and the accompanying $1,000 cash prize, along with the Martha Allan challenge trophy for its visual merits.

SWEEP FOR EAST
All other regular festival trophies went to two other eastern Canada groups.

The Playcraftsmen of Toronto had their "On Borrowed Time" named runner-up to the Montreal production. The white veteran Rex Devlin as stumps in the Paul O'Brien comedy was chosen as best actor. Mrs. Blanch Hogg best supporting actress as Granny, and L. C. Tobias best director.

Mr. Speaight chose Luce Triggane as best actress for her role as Mrs. Gibbs in "Notre Petite Ville" presented by the Union Theatre de Sherbrooke, while Jean Beare in the same cast as George Gibbs was cited as best supporting actor. The play itself, a translation of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," was top French-language production.

Production excluding the festival winner.

N.B. ACTRESS NAMED
"Two books comprised 'surprise' awards. One went to the Medicine Hat Civic Theatre for teamwork in Stalg 17, and the other to Joan Mansfield of the University of New Brunswick Drama Society who as Olmeca Feal in J. B. Priestley's 'Dangerous Corner' gave the best characterization through voice."

Mr. Speaight, 56-year-old British author and director, had not enough kind words for the Montreal four-penny theatre and its 'Tour Eiffel Qui Tue' (The Eiffel Tower That Kills). He termed it "absolutely equal in achievement" with the Toronto play.

It was "profoundly original" by the Montrealers that made up Mr. Speaight's mind. To the Canadian festival, the French farce was "not only a new play but new theatre," and the competition in future work use more of that sort.

A good deal about the last-night play was unknown. The author was Guillaume Hanoteau, a name familiar to no one in festival circles. He was a prodigious writer, virtually unknown in Paris where it was found a few years ago by a member of the Montreal company.

It is a concoction of tragedy, comedy, music and romance, and succeeds within 12 scenes and two acts—about two hours in all—to tell the quandry in Paris when the Eiffel tower was built in 1889. Colorful costumes were displayed against a simple set with few props.

THREE BELOW PAR
Adjudicator in French, Mr. Speaight said "theatre such as this is theatre as it was presented by the Greeks of Aristophanes, the jugglers of the Middle Ages and the proaire theatre of Renaissance Italy."

Of the eight plays in the festival, Mr. Speaight picked three which he said dropped below good Dominion festival standards.

These were Anastasia by the Vancouver Little Theatre Association, the University of New Brunswick presentation of 'Dangerous Corner' and the production of 'The Crucible' by the Hamilton Players' Guild.

Of the others, he said they were of such quality he could have them included as they stood in any good repertory theatre in England—the only yardstick he could use.

NFLD. PLAY PRAISED
One of these was the Saturday matinee production of John Patrick's 'The Hasty Heart' by the Theatre Arts Club of St. John's, Nfld., which since it was formed only six months ago became the youngest group entered in the national finals.

Mr. Speaight said it was much better than several of the plays chosen for evening billings during the week. It was a production with "remarkable finish... a competent piece of work... as good a performance of this slight but charming play as we have any right to expect."

Paul O'Neil, who played the lead as Lancelotti in the Newfoundland presentation, was later mentioned by Mr. Speaight as one of the contenders for the best actor award.

His choice of Luce Triggane as best actress was made, he said, after also considering Rae Brown as the dowager empress and Edith Dean in the title role of Anastasia, Marilyn Dale as nurse Margaret in 'The Hasty Heart' and Lise Chemo as Emily Webb in 'Notre Petite Ville.'

Mr. Speaight commended the St. John's cast for good voice projection, the week-long problem of other groups in the 'big auditorium.'

He described Mr. O'Neil's performance as "enchanting" and the set as "excellent, exceeding well lit."

The play as a whole required a certain amount of team skill to be effective and "the company from St. John's should be congratulated on getting it off without any apparent effort."

The parents, it was learned, are not planning any trip to Montreal from their home at Callander, Ont., to visit Marie, who with her three surviving sisters celebrates her 23rd birthday next Tuesday.

WON'T HAVE PARTY
Marie, smallest and frailest of the quintets at birth, underwent radium treatment for the same condition of an infant and has had similar treatments off and on throughout her life.

The source said the need for the radium treatments is the reason Marie has been in hospital for the last three weeks.

As a result of her confinement to hospital, the four surviving Dionne quintuplets won't have a birthday party Tuesday. Another reason is that her sisters are busy.

Annette is writing exams at a Nicolet, Que., convent, 80 miles from Montreal. Cecile and Yvonne will be "on duty" at St. Laurent.

The fifth quintuplet, Emilie, died while suffering an epileptic seizure Aug. 6, 1954.

Marie entered the luxurious Pavilion Royal, a wing of the Hotel Dieu, three weeks ago, Sunday Philippe Langlois, friend of the Dionne girls and Cecile's beau, said she would probably remain in hospital for another week or two.

Inquiries Saturday about what the four Quints planned to do on their birthday anniversary—which they have always spent together—led to the disclosure of Marie's illness.

"There is nothing seriously the matter with her," Mr. Langlois said. "She is just in hospital for a rest."

Information from hospital staff members who have seen Marie walking in the hospital corridors and spoken to her by telephone tended to confirm the statement by Cecile's boyfriend.

Marie's name is not on the hospital patients' lists and she is receiving no visitors but her sisters, Marie, who has been living in an apartment above her old flower shop since last year, keeping house for her sisters when they were able to visit, will probably continue that role. She will move to a different apartment in another part of Montreal when she recovers.

MORE INDEPENDENT
Since coming of age two years ago the four surviving Quints have become increasingly independent of their family, who still live near Callander, Ont., close to the country home which became world famous when the Quints were born there in 1934.

On reaching 21, the girls came into a $1,000,000 inheritance, now administered for them by the Guaranty Trust Company here.

Mr. LeBlanc defeated another of last year's vice-presidents, Harry E. Watten of Fredericton, in the only contest.

Vice-presidents elected by acclamation were: Harold Hatfield, Woodstock, N.B.; Edward Ronayne, Moncton; Joseph Demost, Dartmouth, N.S.; Keith Neilson, Amherst, and Arnold Wightman Moniasque, P.E.I.

About 200 Jaycees and Jaycettes attended the convention. Members of the St. John's Nfld., junior chamber were present for the first time, but the group did not become formally affiliated with the three-province district.

Elmer Doiron, Halifax, was the winner of an oratorical contest in which five regional winners participated.

Immigration Minister Pickersgill was chief speaker at a luncheon and presented citizenship certificates to about 25 Jaycees who are native-born Canadians. Frederic Tremblay was the main speaker at the dinner meeting. Among those at the luncheon were Labor Minister Gregg and Mrs. Gregg. Guests at the head table at both functions were piped into the room by Miss Carol Hines of Sydney.

Marie Dionne Ill; Birthday Party Dropped For This Year

Since then, they have figured in periodic crops of rumors. Nearly every milestone in their lives has been marked by reports of one kind or another. Addresses they have tried to keep secret have become public. They now have become so shy they are practically impossible to communicate with.

When the Quints decided not to go home for Christmas in 1955, the family fireworks flared. Their father, Oliva Dionne, publicly accused "those close to them" in Montreal of exerting undue influence over the girls.

Differences were patched up, but last year the girls again spent Christmas in Montreal, saying they hadn't enough time free from their studies to go home.

The girls, between 14 and 16 years old, each wore one glove and jeans. When police arrived the girls were not carrying any weapons, but there were a number of short pieces of lead pipe on the ground and police believe the feminine fighters intended to use them in the fray.

The girls refused to tell police why the "rumble" had been arranged and offered no explanation for the opposing group's failure to appear.

Ottawa Girl Gangs Quiet

OTTAWA (CP) — All was quiet on Ottawa's girl gang front during the weekend.

Police Friday night picked up 14 teen-age girls, wearing leather jackets, as they waited for a rival group to show up for a gang war.

The girls were later turned over to their parents for treatment and an Ottawa morally officer said Sunday night "every thing's closed" as far as the police are concerned.

Police were tipped of the prospective battle by a telephone call they believe came from a member of the rival gang, which didn't show up.

The girls, between 14 and 16 years old, each wore one glove and jeans. When police arrived the girls were not carrying any weapons, but there were a number of short pieces of lead pipe on the ground and police believe the feminine fighters intended to use them in the fray.

The girls refused to tell police why the "rumble" had been arranged and offered no explanation for the opposing group's failure to appear.

Little Theatre
Morrison, President of the Drama Festival Association. Mr. H. Barry Bugden presided.

Professor Sipprell told the Saturday night audience that he admired the courage shown by the Little Theatre Guild players in staging "Journey's End". It is a very difficult script... two sides to almost everything in it... very hard to handle," he said.

In the adjudicator's opinion this production did not portray sufficiently well the "complexity" of the various characters. He declared that the sound cues were "Effective", but could have been improved. The lighting he considered excellent particularly around the entrance to the dugout. Some difficulty with "accent" was noted by the adjudicator who observed that many English plays make the trans-atlantic transition "very easily", but "Journey's End" could not be numbered among such.

The adjudicator criticized the group for extending too long the intervals between the scenes, stating that only the time necessary to close and re-open the curtain would have been sufficient.

THE CAST
Following is the cast which took part in "Journey's End": Captain Hardy, J. T. Place; Lieutenant Osborne, Herbert Baxter; 2nd Lieut. Raleigh, Frank Zakem; Private Mason, Bert Shama; Capt. Stanhope, Peter Foster; 2nd Lieut. Trotter, Dick Turpin; 2nd Lieut. Hibbert, Arthur MacLean; Lance Corporal Soughton and Runner, Charlie Whist; Company Sgt.
