Newsman Reports Changes, No Rebellion In Satellites

Editor's note: There is strong pressure for change in the Communist nations of east Europe. But don't expect rebellion. In this final story in a series on East Europe today, AP correspondent Richard O'Reagan sums up his own and the estimate of other observers on the future of communism in the satellites.

By RICHARD O'REGAN

PRAGUE (AP) — Are there cracks in the Iron Curtain? Is an evolution occurring in communism?

On a tour of Communist East Europe, you will hear many diplomats expressing the view things are changing in Russia and East Europe.

These changes, they say, may be bringing communism closer to the West in thought, politics and economics.

But these changes do not mean communism has abandoned its concepts of class war and world domination, the diplomats stress. The West, they add, cannot let down its guard.

What are the changes? First, communism has found you cannot run East Europeans by Stalinist terror. So the midnight knock of the secret police is out. The new principle is persuasion.

Second, people who work and work and get nothing in return will revolt as they did in Hungary, Poland and East Berlin. So, throughout East Europe, there now are more things to buy, more to eat, better housing, although still many shortages. In fact, life often is better than in Russia itself.

Third, there is more scope for individual expression and more personal freedom. In Yugoslavia, Hungary and Poland, you can even criticize the regime provided you don't propose doing away with it.

GIVE INCENTIVES

Fourth, there are attempts, particularly in Yugoslavia, to stimulate working incentives and to recognize that people all won't fit into one mold.

Would it be correct to say that communism is approaching some of the ideas and practices of Western capitalism? I posed this question to a group of Hungarian Communist writers, who replied:

"Let's not say that. Let's rather say that communism is becoming more humanistic. If there is good in capitalism, we will use it—but without the capitalists."

In other words, the Communists don't intend to allow individuals to own the sources and means of production.

But, as popular pressure builds up from below, they recognize they may have to give people more rights and privileges, and they recognize that people won't work just for slogans or for future generations.

Meanwhile, the dynamic West European Common Market soars ahead, and each of the East European countries wants to buy German, English, French and Italian goods. They need Western products to build up their own industry.

"The wealth, ideas and technology of the Common Market," said one Western diplomat, "are a menace to communism. Russia and the East European satellites must keep up with it, or collapse."

Increase In Shareholders Seen Dramatic Development

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

The increase in the numbers of people who own shares in companies is of keen interest, of course, to financial and investment men.

Probably it is of as much interest to public men running for office—if, as is generally believed, the person who owns something takes a different look at issues than the person who owns nothing.

Exchange, publication of the New York Stock Exchange, describes the increase as "one of the most dramatic and significant social - economic developments of our times," and adds:

"It means that this huge group should have, through their direct ownership, an increasing awareness of how our system of free enterprise really works and what it means to them personally."

The comment is made in connection with publication of the exchange's latest census of United States share owners.

INCREASES SIGNIFICANT

It shows that as of early 1962 a total of 17,010,000 men, women and children owned shares of American companies, an increase of 10,500,000 over the 6,500,000 reported in the exchange's first census in 1952. In the last three years the increase has averaged 1,500,000 annually.

No parallel figures are available for Canada. If the sometimes-used yardstick of 1-10th is used it might indicate 1,700,000 share owners in Canada, but investment circles consider this figure too high.

The New York analysis shows 6,300 publicly-held corporations with 14,400,000,000 outstanding shares with an estimated market value of $531,000,000,000. Individual owners held shares valued at $341,000,000,000, with the remaining $190,000,000,000 owned by institutions, corporations and brokerage firms.

Medium household income of shareowners was $8,600 compared with $7,000 in 1959—attributed to increase in average family income and a rise in ownership in higher - income brackets. Largest increases were recorded among household incomes of $10,000 to $15,000.

EDUCATION A FACTOR

More than 80 per cent of adult share owners were high school graduates; more than half had some college training; and nearly one-third were college graduates.

Largest segment of the employed share-owning population was 3,000,000 clerical and sales people.

Largest of any group was 5,500,000 housewives (including non - employed adult women), who constituted 34 per cent of share owners. Share ownership by sex, however, was more evenly divided than in previous censuses. The division still favored women, 51 per cent to 49 per cent; compared with 52.5 and 47.5 in 1959. One out of six women share owners was a widow.

Lowest incidence of ownership—fewer than one out of 50 —was among farmers and farm laborers.

BUZZ U.S. PLANES

BERLIN (AP) — A U.S. spokesman disclosed Thursday that a Soviet fighter flew near an American commercial airliner about the same time another Soviet craft buzzed an American government plane in a Berlin air corridor about 11 a.m. Tuesday.

HALIFAX ENDS FREE PARKING

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax motorists accustomed to free downtown parking Saturday will have to pay up in the future — as some unfortunate ones have already found out.

Police have announced that henceforth they will enforce parking regulations on Saturdays, something they haven't always been able to do in the past because the constables who did the job were on a five-day week. Now, the ticketing has been taken over by commissionaires.

The situation caused a mild panic when the first tickets were written last weekend. Several downtown taverns were almost emptied when patrons fled for their cars after waiters announced that the commissionaires were making the rounds.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	3♣	4♥

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

This hand features unusually good defense. South got to six spades, which turned out to be a poor contract even though his side had 33 high-card points.

North's distribution was the worst possible for slam purposes. If he had had a diamond more and a club less, seven spades would have been a laydown. Or if South had held three diamonds instead of three hearts or three clubs, the slam would have been sure to make.

But with the actual distribution—North and South each holding five spades, three hearts, two diamonds and three clubs—there was no ruffing power and a heart and a club loser appeared to be the dealer's lot.

South did all he could to avoid defeat. He won the club lead with the ace, drew two rounds of trumps, and cashed the A-K of diamonds. He then played the king of clubs and exited with a club, which West was forced to win.

West was Mae Rosen, who, together with Mrs. Edith Kemp, once won the national women's pair championship three years in a row. Mrs. Rosen realized declarer was out of diamonds and clubs and that she would have to lead a heart, because otherwise South would get a ruff and discard.

So she led a heart—but was careful to lead the jack. Declarer could not cope with this play. If he took the jack with the ace, he would later lose a trick to the queen.

And if South took the jack with the king, he would still have to lose a heart. If he followed this up by playing the ten from dummy, East would cover with the queen. If he had the eight, East would play low to defeat the contract.

Observe that if Mrs. Rosen had led a low heart instead of the jack, South would have made the slam by playing the eight. This play first traps East's queen and later, West's jack.
