Laos Troops Braced For Rebels' Offensive

By DAVID LANCASHIRE VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Royal Laotian troops braced Thursday for what they fear will be an all-out offensive by communist rebels now moving on an unexpectedly broadened front. The pro-Western government announced that Communist guerrillas now are operating in a half dozen provinces along the northern mountainous backbone, some as deep as the South Viet Nam border. The skirmishing that flared last month in two northern provinces—Sam Neua and Phong Saly—threatens to spread over a 500-mile line. Military reports from the north said the rebels, though specialists in hit-and-run tactics, are holding one-fifth of Sam Neua province. These advisers said the government is losing men daily in paratroop clashes. TRAINED, EQUIPPED Sam Neua province adjoins Communist North Viet Nam, which Laos charges has trained, armed and equipped border tribesmen for the uprising. Man-to-man, the rebels would have a chance in regular battle, the army of Laos believes. But that isn't the way they fight. They were estimated Wednesday to number only 3,500, against 25,000 in the American-equipped Laotian army. The general staff said the Communists have used the relative quiet of the last two weeks to re-inforce and resupply the guerrilla battalions. "Now that the preparations have ended," a staff communique said, "the enemy probably will unleash a major offensive."

DEATH NOTICE

REUBEN HAVELOCK DRAKE Reuben Havelock Drake, a well known and respected resident of Bristol passed away on Saturday, July 18 at the age of seventy-eight. He had been in failing health for a number of years and had been in the P. E. I. Hospital for nearly a year, but was a man of great patience and with God's help he carried his burden, seldom complaining till his Heavenly Master called him home to his eternal reward. The late Mr. Drake was born in Cran Harbour, N.S., he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Drake. He started fishing as a young man and followed that occupation till his retirement nine years ago. He had been a faithful member of Bristol United Church for many years. He is survived by his sorrowing widow, one half-sister Mrs. James Blaxland, two half-brothers, James Drake and Robert Drake, as well as many relatives and friends. The funeral which was largely attended was held on Tuesday, July 21, from Bristol United Church. The service was conducted by his minister, Rev. J. M. Sheen. Hymns sung were "Jesus Lover of my Soul," and "What a Friend we have in Jesus." The choir rendered "Each Step I take is one step nearer Home." The pallbearers were: D. C. MacDougall, J. J. Perry, Vernon Anderson, Roy Cairns, Lloyd MacEwen and Patrick Sinnott. Burial was in West St. Peters Cemetery. Floral tributes as follows: PILLLOW Wife WREATHS Vivian, Bobby and Marilyn Piessah and Jim John and Elvie Kenneth, Dot and family John, Hattie and Girls Maurice, Ada and Mariene SPRAYS Edna, Jimmie and Garth Gladys, Eldon, Beth and Gordon Grace and Mel Mrs. Florence Drake and family The Dingwells, Soure Mrs. Lodge Birt, Carl and Millie Mrs. Ernest Baker variety of the problems which face the individual farmer and the rural community. FALL FAIRS The next month will see a continued succession of county and regional fairs. Alberton, Egmont Bay, Crapaud, Souris and the Dundas ploughing match all provide an opportunity for the display of livestock and other farm products as well as one for meeting friends and renewing acquaintances. EGGS AND ARMED FORCES Policy in installations of the Armed Forces has been to require that all eggs consumed must be grade A Large. This does not appear logical to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture which sees no good reason why members of the armed forces could not be satisfactorily nourished on A Mediums—an excellent product of the highest quality and economic to boot. Further to this belief the Federation is requesting those in authority to direct that the purchase of the medium eggs be permitted. PRICE SUPPORTS As a result of its semi-annual meeting in Winnipeg the Federation went on record as follows: 1. That no deficiency payment program of egg supports be established. 2. That eggs be eliminated from the list of mandatory products in the act. 3. That the floor on skim milk powder be continued to April 30. 4. That the floor remain at 4 cents on butter. 5. That the consumer subsidy be applied to butter to promote consumption. 6. Approved the proposed price of $23.65 on hogs and proposed that the deficiency payment program be abandoned. 7. That the quality premium on hogs be set at $3 for A's and $1 for B's for a period of eighteen months after which time the premium should be $4 on A's and removed on B's.

TIDE DROWNS TWO ABERAVON, Wales (Reuters) Two children marooned on a wrecked ship by the rising tide near the beach here Thursday were drowned before rescuers could reach them. Three others were saved and taken to hospital. The children had been playing on the wreck and did not see the rising tide until the water was too deep for them to wade ashore.

AMONG THE FARMERS

Federation of Agriculture Newsletter

COLIN G. GROFF Colin Groff, secretary of the C.F.A. from 1944 until 1953, passed away on August 10 after a career of notable contributions to Canadian agriculture. Mr. Groff was not a farmer but few men have done more to explain farming and agriculture to people in other walks of life. Newspaper work and public relations was his career and as secretary of the federation his experience in those two fields enabled him to make an outstanding contribution. Mr. Groff had a pleasing personality and did a great deal to make the succession of new directors coming of the C.F.A. board feel at home. Islanders will be interested in the fact that one of his daughters is married to Archibald Donalds, a former Islander. AFTERMATH With Exhibition Week over, many people are now returning to the routine of daily living. On the farm this means the usual round of chores plus a winding up of having operations delayed by the long spell of wet weather. Hay which was lying on the ground during that period is now of practically no value. That which was standing lost much of its original value and we foresee active dissatisfaction on the part of some of the livestock over their fare this winter. The ripening grain will provide by early September the next big exercise, the crop is a very promising one although in some cases fields are very badly lodged. DAIRY BOOTH The booth operated each year during Old Home Week by the Dairymen's Association is designed to do two things. In the first place it renders a service in making available milk, chocolate milk and butter milk for thirsty visitors. Secondly, the booth brings to the attention of the public the dairy industry and its association. Perhaps it should be mentioned that the booth provides employment and experience in meeting the public for a number of young ladies from the 4-H clubs. PLACE MATS This year for the first time the Dairymen's Association has made available to a number of restaurants and caterers a place mat designed to advertise the dairy industry and to extend a welcome to visitors in the province. Such place mats are quite an effective way of attracting the attention of large numbers of people. RURAL STUDY The field work in the socio-economic study now being carried out in 14 lots of the province is almost completed. Now remains the task of considerable magnitude, that of compiling and analysing the material and finally the arriving at conclusions to be drawn. The final value of the entire report. Promoters of the study are hopeful that answers will come from the study on a

THOUGHTS FOR OUR TIME

BY HIS EMINENCE CARDINAL McGUIGAN

THESE LITTLE DODGES BREAK THE MORAL LAW One of the lessons we learn from Nature is the necessity of constant renewal for everything that grows. New life comes to plants through the constant cycle of death and rebirth, and even in the human body there is a continual process of renewal. This is not true, however, of our minds. Our ideas do not by themselves change. We can of course add new ideas, compare, correct and qualify our notions, but if we do not do this, we will hold on to our original ideas until we gradually forget them. This stability in our thinking is something we can be grateful for. It is this quality that makes it worth while for us to try to find out the truth about things, because when we have the truth, it will not suddenly transform itself into something else. On the other hand we do not reach the truth automatically the way a plant grows if it is given the right conditions. There are things that we have to do if we want to possess more and more of the truth. I would like to call attention to one particular application of this law of our moral judgments. It is an area in which the need of positive effort to grow towards the truth is of paramount importance, and yet very often almost totally neglected. SMALL FAILURES There is of course widespread agreement about some moral judgments. Nobody will defend murder or unjust aggression (at least not unless these evils are well disguised). But it is common knowledge that a great many people simply choose to ignore many of the small applications of the moral law. This is not done with a conscious setting-aside of morality; the attitude is rather that so many people do these things that they must be all right. Consider, for example, the failure in justice of many people who use their employer's time for their own needs, or who waste time, or who work in a careless manner. Or consider the failure in truthfulness of those who lie about goods in order to sell them, whether in advertisements or over a counter. Or those who tell lies about their income to the Income Tax Department. Or take the whole area covered by the virtue of charity: those who risk their own lives and the lives of others by careless driving, or driving under the influence of alcohol; or those who damage reputations by talking about people. I think we could all find more examples of the kind of things I am talking about—though most of us would be much more aware of others' faults in these matters than of our own. In almost all of these matters—and some of them are quite serious, and not "mere peccadilloes"—there is a certain connivance with others and with public opinion. The employer sometimes takes for granted that his employees will cheat him in small things, and people come to treat almost all advertising as untruthful. Yet even when wrong is done unknowingly, or under social pressure that almost amounts to apathy, or with condonation on the part of authority—even when there are a thousand excuses, it is still wrong that is done, and it still has a damaging effect both on the one who does it and on any others who are affected. MUST DO SOMETHING What we face in this matter is a dangerous climate of opinion, an atmosphere far worse in the moral order than the worst dangers of atomic fall - out. The strength of moral judgment is slowly weakened by many small compromises. And as we mentioned in the beginning of this article, we cannot expect this situation to change automatically. We must do something about it. It is not the kind of thing that can be helped by making more laws. Nor will any sort of advertising encourage people to face the inconvenience, embarrassment, and sometimes sacrifice that will be necessary to change things. We do have many religious re-

DEATH NOTICE

MRS. (REV.) W.J. MACLEOD A wide community of relatives and friends learned with deep regret of the passing of Mrs. (Rev.) W.J. MacLeod, nee Florence M. MacLean R.N., at her home in Charlottetown on the morning of Saturday July 4th., 1959. Florrie as she wished to be known was a general favorite. She dearly loved people both young and old. She had a kind thought for everyone and she response was beloved by all. She walked: "In His Steps" and taught by example rather than precept. As her friends said: "To know her was to love her". Mrs. MacLeod was a daughter of the late Murdoch MacLean, a founder of the firm of MacLean Brothers at North Wiltshire, and his wife, Bessie MacLeod, daughter of the late John K. and Mrs. MacLeod of Springfield. Her mother passed away at an early age and Florrie, then a very young school girl, was left to be both mother and sister to her one sister and five brothers who will ever cherish her memory as the epitome of all that is finest and best in womanhood. There was: "No such word as fail" with Florrie. She persevered in her studies entered Prince of Wales College and acquired her certificates without difficulty. She also assisted other members of her family to make the grade. Continuing her education she took a years work at Halifax Ladies' College before proceeding to Royal Victoria Hospital at Montreal, from which institution she was graduated R.N., in
