The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1♣	Pass	1♠
Pass	3♠	Pass	4♠

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

You don't see the declarer's cards when you are defending a contract, but that shouldn't stop you from making certain reasonable assumptions about the nature of his hand.

It is a basic principle of defense to assume that partner has the necessary cards or distribution that will permit the contract to be defeated. To play otherwise is a form of defeatism, and it cannot be right to play on the basis that you are licked before you start.

Here is a hand to illustrate the point. South was in four spades and West led a diamond. Declarer won it in dummy and led the jack of spades, losing to the ace. It was now up to West to make the only play that could defeat the contract.

He led the jack of hearts and then it did not matter what declarer did because he had to go down one. If South covered the jack with the queen, East would take the ace and return the nine to trap the ten and thus score three heart tricks, while if declarer ducked the jack lead, East would likewise duck and in this way score three heart tricks. So South went down one.

If West had led any heart but the jack, South would have made the contract. By playing properly, he could hold himself to two heart losers instead of three. And if West had not led a heart at all after taking the ace of spades, South would have made the hand easily.

West's heart lead was based on the assumption that East had to have the ace for the contract to be defeated. For West to credit South with the ace would have been equivalent to conceding the contract to him. The jack was selected as the heart to lead to cover the possibility that declarer had 10-x-x.

The jack play could conceivably have cost West a trick (if South had the ace), but it could not cost him the contract.

OLD ARMOR DRAWS INTEREST

LONDON (Reuters) — King Henry VIII, England's six-times-married 16th - century monarch, is doing his bit for America's space research program.

Airresearch Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles has asked the Tower of London for details on Henry's armor, on the chance that ye olde armorers had some tricks of the trade that might fit into space suit design.

The 94-pound suit of armor on display in the Tower has beautifully articulated joints which allow its wearer full mobility while covering every part of the body.

A. N. Kennard, assistant master of armories at the Tower of London, said the suit was designed for jousting tournaments on foot.

FAMOUS PARK

St. James's Park in the heart of London, England, was established by Henry VIII as a private park for deer.

EMINENT GROUP

The French Academy, founded by Cardinal Richelieu, received its royal charter in 1635.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR
is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
