Hope River C. W. L. Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of St. Ann's Sub-division of the C. W. L. was held on Sunday, April 26th with a good attendance of members. The President, Mrs. Andrew Gallant presided. In the absence of the Chaplain, Rev. W. V. McDonald, the meeting was opened with prayer by the President. The minutes of the last annual meeting, and previous meeting were read by the Secretary and adopted. A general report of the year's activities was outlined by the President. A detailed report of the year's work was read by the Secretary Treasurer. This was followed by the report on Social Service by the Convener, Mrs. Thomas Bolger, showing very much good work accomplished by the Committee, Mrs. Alexis Murphy and Mrs. Frank Gallant.

The election of officers then took place. On motion of Mrs. Joseph Pineau, seconded by Miss Marie McLellan and adopted unanimously, the slate of officers for the past year was re-elected for the coming year. This was acknowledged by the President and Secretary-Treasurer, who thanked the members for their trust in them and solicited their co-operation in the year just entered into.

Complimentary remarks were made by the Past President, Mrs. L. J. Murphy, Mrs. Teresa Reid and others. Thus was brought to a close a very successful year during which much good has been accomplished and many acts of charity done which are not recorded here, but all go to uphold our motto "For God and Canada."

Secretary-Treasurer's Report To our Rev. Chaplain, Madame President, Officers and members:

At this, our annual meeting, I shall try to present to you a report of our activities during the year from April 1935 to April 1936. During the year we held ten regular meetings and six executive meetings. We have seventy-seven members on our roll. In November we had a Mass offered for our deceased members and on April 26th, the Feast of Our Lady of Good Counsel we had another Mass offered for the living members. During the year the altar was taken care of by several members each month. Flowers were purchased at Christmas for the altar.

To raise funds to carry on our work, we held entertainments of various kinds among which were two bazaars and chicken suppers, card parties in the homes, etc. During the year our Social Service Committee supplied clothing, rubbers, also groceries and medicine for a sick person. At Christmas boxes of fruit, food, etc., were sent to help brighten and cheer those who needed such things. Gross receipts for the year were $601.32.

Table with columns: Receipts, Expenditures, Balance. Total receipts: $601.32, Total expenditures: $581.01, Balance: $20.31.

$4,000,000 LOSS FROM WARBLE FLY

(By The Canadian Press) REGINA, May 13—The annual loss to livestock men in Canada through the warble fly totals $4,000,000 annually, F. Baker, Winnipeg, of Canadian Packers and Industrial Development Council, told a conference of the Western Canada Livestock Union here.

An increase in the number of low-grade cattle produced in the west was reported to the meeting. Speakers urged a better system of grading, either on the hoof or en route to market to give the producer a fairer return. Delegates favored production of a national advertising campaign to promote use of meats, particularly beef.

The tendency to produce lighter, finished cattle for the market was noted by the conference. It was decided a steer of 1,000 pounds giving a carcass of 500 pounds would prove most profitable to producers.

RAISING CALVES

Farmers who sell whole milk will find the following suggestions helpful:

- 1. Leave the calf with its mother for one to three days after birth. 2. Feed whole milk during the first two or three weeks. Be careful not to overfeed. 3. It is best to feed the milk directly after milking, and always from clean utensils. Milk which has been allowed to cool should be warmed to 95 degrees F. 4. Start feeding powdered skim-milk or powdered buttermilk mixed with warm water at the rate of one part powder to nine parts water, as a substitute for whole milk. Make all changes in feed gradually. 5. Semi-solid or condensed buttermilk may be used as a substitute mixed with about three times their weight of warm water for feeding. 6. Feed the prepared milk mixtures to calves in the same way and in the same amounts as ordinary skim-milk. 7. Feed grain and hay as soon as the calf can learn to eat it. 8. Calves may be weaned from milk when about 70 days old, although better results are secured from feeding longer. 9. There are several satisfactory prepared calf meals on the market.

PAY TRIBUTES TO EDMONTON PUBLISHER

EDMONTON, May 13—(C.P.)—Charles E. Campbell, publisher of the Edmonton Bulletin, paid tribute today to the late Robert Cromie. "Western Canada loses a dynamic figure in the passing of Mr. Cromie," he said. "During the 20 years I was associated with him I learned to value his extraordinary ability and resourcefulness. He had a determination and aggressiveness possessed by few and these qualities and his leadership have been evident in the building up of the Vancouver Sun with which as a partner I was privileged to be associated. "British Columbia in general and Vancouver in particular have lost an outstanding friend."

People Blocked Haig Dismissal By War Premier

(By Thomas F. Channon) (Canadian Press Staff Writer) LONDON, May 13—In the second issue of "Haig" by Alfred Duff Cooper, secretary for war, the author paints a picture of the British commander-in-chief as conceited and harassed — his name deleted and his achievements belittled. The book has been published by Macmillan. It was already plain in 1916, says Duff Cooper, that Prime Minister Lloyd George had no confidence in his own commander-in-chief. The author does not agree with the war premier's estimate of Haig's fitness for the post. "The excuse which he has put forward for not dismissing Haig was two. The first is that though he was a bad general the whole British Empire could not produce a better. Such an admission of Imperial bankruptcy can hardly be taken seriously, and will therefore be taken by Haig's admirers as a handsome tribute. "The second excuse, and the more convincing, is that though he wanted to get rid of Haig, his Cabinet colleagues, the press and public, prevented him doing so. He has himself never lacked courage, and if the storm was one that he dared not face we may be sure that it would have proved something more than a squall. The truth is that for some curious reason which he cannot explain, the people of Great Britain, who are not always lacking in sagacity, had greater faith in the stupid soldier than in the clever politician."

In this connection it is worth recalling that Lloyd George in his Memoirs referred to a "Dominion General" as being the only man qualified to supersede Haig. When The Canadian Press asked Lloyd George to name this General he gave the name of General Monash, of the Australian Army. Reference is made in Haig's Diary to meeting Monash in July 1918, when the tide of battle was turning in our favor. "Monash," wrote Haig, "is a most thorough and capable commander, who thinks out every detail of any operation and leaves nothing to chance."

If Lloyd George had a poor opinion of Haig this book shows that the distrust was not one-sided. Writing of a meeting with the Prime Minister in Paris in 1917 Haig said: "I thought Lloyd George like our German enemy, who, whenever he proposed to do something frightful, complains first of all that the British or French have committed the enormity which he is meditating. L. G. is feeling that his position as Prime Minister is shaky, and means to try to vindicate his conduct of the war in the eyes of the public, and try to put the people against the soldiers. In fact to pose as the savior of the country, who has been hampered by bad advice from the General Staff. Of General Pershing, commander of the American Army, Haig wrote: "He is a fine type of man, honest and apparently determined to do what he believes to be right." Just towards the war's close, when Haig had been in London, arguing with the Cabinet as to terms to be offered in the Armistice, he had Pershing to lunch on his return to G.H.Q. "Pershing said he agreed with me both as to the state of the Allied Armies, and as to what our demands should be. As to the American Army he also concurred with me in thinking that it would be next autumn before it could be sufficiently organized and trained to play an important part."

Of Haig's rewards for his service Duff Cooper is scornful because Lloyd George, a few days after the Armistice, offered him a viscountcy. This, says Duff Cooper, is the normal reward which the least distinguished Secretary of State can claim on retirement. To offer it in the greatest hour of victory that the British Army had ever achieved to the man who had commanded that Army for three years and who had refused a similar offer 18 months before was an insult both to the man and to the Army."

When the offer was increased to an earldom, Duff Cooper says, Haig again refused, and accepted in 1920 because he had no wish to make himself unnecessarily conspicuous. "The earldom was accompanied by a grant of £100,000, which can hardly be considered as excessive when it is remembered that Wellington was given £2,000 for life when the Peninsular War was only half over, and that sum was made up to half a million before the Battle of Waterloo!"

cover Sun, who died Monday. "Robert Cromie was a dreamer in quite a large and interesting way. "He was always visioning better things, greater things. But there was a very practical side to him too, and this compelled him to do something to make his dreams ne true. "Some of the dreams were too vast and too far to be practical. But others he made come true. It was no small thing to build up a great newspaper property from nothing in less than 20 years or to make himself a very competent editor and business executive. "He accomplished that and became in the process not only a British Columbia but a national figure. Had he lived longer he might have gone much farther, both for himself and British Columbia. It is a thousand pities that his restless energy and ranging mind had to be stilled so soon."

Second Prize Winner in Housing Competition

DOMINION HOUSING ACT

Architectural drawings for a house under the Dominion Housing Act. Includes a view from the street, basement plan, first floor plan, second floor plan, and floor plan. The house is a two-story Georgian-style residence with a gabled roof and a central chimney. The drawings show a well-proportioned layout with a living room, dining room, kitchen, and bedrooms.

Here is one of the two second prize winners in the contest conducted by the federal government in connection with the Dominion Housing Act, for plans for houses that could be built for $2,500 to $3,000. The actual cost of this house can be determined by multiplying the cubic contents by 30 cents, since in all cases, the estimate of cost of building was set at 30 cents per cubic foot. The above house of Georgian style has a squarer living-room, 14' by 18', and it opens on a terrace. There is a dining alcove 10'6" by 7'6", entered by an arch from the living-room and a door from the kitchen which is 14' by 8' and very conveniently laid out. There are three bedrooms: 14'9" by 17'3", 14'6" by 8'6" and 10' by 8'.
