BULLET-PROOF CLOTH. THE INVENTION OF A GERMAN TAILOR MEETS EXPECTATIONS.

By the Aid a Soldier Will be Rendered Imperious to Bullets—The Inventor Submits to Very Hazardous Experiments and Proves Invulnerable.

Experts in military affairs, not only in Berlin, but throughout Europe, are discussing the recent experiments made with the bullet-proof coat invented by Herr Dowe, the Mannheim tailor. There seems to be no longer any doubt that Dowe's invention is a most valuable one, and that he was justified in refusing the princely offers made to him by firms of army contractors and others who are desirous of purchasing his rights.

"I had commenced a series of experiments which were even more interesting than the first. A horse was covered with a bullet-proof coat for it is proposed that the cavalry of the future is to be protected in this manner. In this case a number of shots were fired in quick succession at the animal while it was quietly eating oats from a manger. The horse, a well-trained cavalry mount, started slightly at the first shot, apparently, however, not disturbed by the unexpected report of the rifle. Then other shots were fired as quickly as possible, some of them striking the horse in the same place as the previous bullets, but the horse continued eating as if nothing extraordinary was happening. A naval officer who was present at the experiment asked Herr Dowe if his bullet-proof armor could be applied to warships, and he was assured by the inventor that a ship protected in this manner would stand a pounding from all the warships in the world without sustaining any considerable damage."

The new garment is described as looking like ordinary army clothing material, the resisting secret substance being laid beneath the outside cloth. The manner in which the material is fastened is fastened to the side buttons of the soldier's uniform. It is only to be used in actual warfare and weighs about six pounds. Representatives of several foreign governments have been asking strong efforts to obtain Herr Dowe's secret, but it is said that these efforts have failed, and patriotic Germans express the desire that the German government should secure Herr Dowe's secret, so that the bullet-proof coats may be used by the German army alone. It is said that three million marks have been offered to Herr Dowe by the German government for his invention, or, as an alternative, a hundred years' guarantee of the monopoly of supplying the German government with the necessary amount of cuirasses at the rate of twelve marks apiece.

How She Gets Rid of Them. "Do you know," said a dearly pretty little girl, "I go about alone a great deal, and I never have any of the trouble that other girls tell me about, and I do believe it is because I am so sociable." "It seemed an odd reason and I asked explanation.

"Well, you see," she said, "I hardly ever go anywhere without having the usual 'masher' approach me and say: 'Excuse me, miss, but I think I have met you before.' Then I say with a careful courtesy, as if desirous to save him embarrassment, 'I am sure you are mistaken. I know I have never seen you before.' I have never known an instant apology to fail, nor a fellow of this kind to act any other way than most desirous to appear the gentleman for which I seem to have mistaken him. I always smile frankly, bow, and pass on, and more than once I have noticed that the man has bowed me respectfully at a distance, and I have known it was to prevent any one else from trying the same thing he failed at.—Chicago Journal.

George Eliot's Face. "Once when, as a very young girl, I sat at the feet of Walter Savage Landor in Florence, reciting to him my Latin lesson, I stopped conjuncting 'anno, anno, amat' to ask how Wordsworth looked. 'That reminds me of what Hazlitt said of Wordsworth,' replied the grand old English lion. 'His face reminds me of a horse, sir.' It is just like a horse, sir. And Hazlitt was right. Wordsworth had the same length of jaw and high-cheeked bones. Whenever I am asked how George Eliot looked I think of Hazlitt's description of the Lake poet, the looker like a female Wordsworth. Every face said to resemble the animal whose nature the human being's most closely resembles. George Eliot recalled the subject of truces.—Kate Field's Washington.

HE'S CURABLE NOW. Chester Loomis was crippled with Kidney Disease—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured him. He is Now Known to All.

NEWCOMB MILLS, June 18.—Chester Loomis, a well known farmer living near here, has for years been afflicted with kidney disease, so badly that he could not sit in a buggy to drive to town. As he is 65 years old he despaired of a cure. He tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured him. He has not done any farm work for years, but he helped to put in this spring's crops, and anyone who goes to see him to-day will find him between the plough-handles instead of laid out on a bed or an easy chair as he used to be.

HE WROTE TO HIS BROTHER. Told Him the Good News, and Advised Him to Use Paine's Celery Compound.

THE MEDICINE THAT CURES.

I had often been asserted that, if men and women would use Paine's Celery Compound when the first indication of trouble and disease are felt, there would be fewer sick people, and less money expended for remedies. There is no medicine in the world as far-reaching in its work and effects as Paine's Celery Compound. It should be in every home where there is sickness, as it suited for every age and class of humanity. We would now draw the attention of man and woman to the fact that, if they have failed with other medicines, Paine's Celery Compound will give them what they desire health and strength. As a proof of this statement we direct attention to the testimony of Mr. A. L. Wood, of Green Village, N. S. He says: "I have much pleasure in adding my letter of testimony to the already large number you have received. In 1893 I took a severe pain in my back, to which I gave but little attention. It extended to the back of my neck, and became very bad. It then seemed to settle on a nerve under the shoulder blade. I used many remedies but got worse instead of better. I consulted my doctor; he said I had neuralgia, and treated me for it. The treatment proved useless, and I consulted two other doctors with no better results. I could not turn over in bed, was very nervous, and less money expended for remedies. After a time getting a little easier, I went to my father-in-law's to spend Christmas; while there my attention was called to a paper on the merits of Paine's Celery Compound, and I read of a party who had been cured, whose case was similar to mine. I sent for a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and after taking it, I found that I could rest easily, and turn in bed without difficulty. The virtues of one bottle of the compound seemed to drive all trouble away. I might also state that I have a garment of Priestley's dress goods in my wardrobe which I have used for some time, and it will wear as well as any other I have had. I had been to mineral springs without receiving any good results. I immediately wrote you and advised you to give your medicine a trial. After using one bottle I was cured and able to resume work. I make these statements voluntarily and for the benefit of those who suffer, and would strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all."

Fatal Result of Delay. Sickness generally follows in the path of neglect. Don't be reckless! But prudently take a few doses of Scott's Emulsion immediately following exposure to cold. It will save you many painful days and sleepless nights.

A lady will sometimes spend hours selecting dress goods. She is not desirous of giving trouble at all. But there are conflicting claims. There are considerations of durability, of texture, of draping. Priestley's dress fabrics have reached a niche in the popular esteem when conflict ceases to vex. It is enough to get Priestley's black dress goods to feel confident that you have the best. They wear better than any other make.

The ladies of Charlottetown are asking for Priestley's dress materials for they are learning that no other black dress fabrics will give the same satisfaction. They drape with a softness and grace that gives perfect delight to a lady of taste and being made of silk and wool, an article of dress woven in a garment of Priestley's dress goods is a work of art in refinement that is as long as there is anything left of it.
